BUSCHE PUTS CARROLL AND PHELPS "IN BAD"

Says They Were Identified With Passage of the St. Louis Street Railway Consolidation Bill.

BUSCHE TOOK $100 FOR FIRST VOTE FOR LOBBY

He Did Not Belong to the Gang but Says He Got as Many Bills Passed as Any Other Legislator.

In detailing to Circuit Attorney Folk the story of corrupt practices in the Missouri legislature during his senatorial career, extending over 12 years, Charles L. Busche mentioned Col. John H. Carroll and William H. Phelps among those who had represented the lobby in its deals with legislators. Others were included in Busche's confession.

Senator Busche identified Carroll and Phelps with the lobby which brought about the passage of the bill to consolidate the street car lines of St. Louis, which form the transit company.

For his vote on that measure Busche received $500.

Busche told Circuit Attorney Folk that he was tempted by a certain lobbyist to vote against a bill, which was popularly considered a sandbagging measure, in 1889. This he did, he says, and soon afterwards the lobbyist mentioned slipped a $100 bill into his pocket.

First Bribe Was Club.

From that time the lobby held a club over his head, he says.

He accepted money to vote for the bill creating a school text book commission. This is the commission which was appointed in 1897, during the administration of Gov. Stephens.

After the bill passed William J. Stone (now United States Senator) induced Gov. Stephens to appoint Prof. Spencer of Marshall, a member of the commission. Subsequently Stone went before the commission and secured for the Boston Book Co., which was a branch of the schoolbook trust a contract to supply books at an increase over the price then being paid by the public school pupils.

Busche was interviewed at his home, 2321 Benton street, by a Post-Dispatch reporter Saturday morning.

"I have no statement to make at this time," he said, in response to a question as to whether he had told all he knew about legislative boodle deals.

He Knew He Was Safe.

"If I had gotten $15,000 out of legislation, as has been published, I would give the money to charity," he volunteered.

"If not $15,000, how much did you receive?"

"O, I am not going to tell that," he replied. "I took an oath not to reveal what transpired before the grandjury, and I shall not do so.

"I was well aware before I went to the Four Courts that any offenses of which I had been guilty were outlawed by the statute of limitations.

When asked about the bribe takers' combine in the legislature, he said:

"I was not a member of the combine. I worked independently of the cliques that dictated legislation. At the same time, I think I had as many laws passed as any other senator."

Ex-Senators Busche, Schweickardt and Rollins have been cited to appear before the grandjury Monday.

It is believed that Rollins knows more about the business methods of the combine than he has already told the circuit attorney.

LAWRENCE WENT IN STYLE

Gaily Dressed, Former Hotel Clerk Started for Penitentiary as Though Off for an Outing.

A. Townley Lawrence, as well dressed and debonair as ever, was taken to Jefferson City Saturday morning to commence his two-year term in the penitentiary for stealing money from a guest of the West End Hotel, where he was formerly clerk.

In the party with Townley were 15 other prisoners, mostly negroes. Townley was not handcuffed, nor did he wear leg shackles.

Attired in a new suit, patent leather shoes, a fashionable hat, kid gloves and spring tie, he walked in front of the rest of the party and went through the midway at Union Station with the air of a man off for a pleasure trip.

HIS WIFE TOOK CARE OF HIM

There Was a Pathetic Parting When Abe Schoenfield Was Taken to the Insane Asylum.

Through the removal of a patient from the observation ward of the City Hospital to the insane asylum Saturday morning, a touching example of wifely devotion came to light. For seven months, Abe Schoenfield, formerly a drygoods merchant in Carondolet, now living at 1112 Morgan street, has been sick. His business troubles and illness brought on a mild form of mania with which his wife contended as well as she was able until a few days ago, when he became violent.

Rest and quiet will cure him, the doctors say, and the wife consented to his removal to the asylum. Their parting in the reception room of the hospital was touching in the extreme, and she continually exhorted him to "put away his foolishness" and be a man.

MISSOURI OFFICER WHOSE GRIM CAMPAIGN MAY MAKE HIM GENERAL

CAPT. JOHN J. PERSHING.

MARKED APPROVAL FOR MISSOURIAN

Capt. John J. Pershing Urged for Brigadier-General for Meritorious Service.

For gallant and meritorious services in subduing the fanatical Moros, Capt. John J. Pershing, a Missourian, may be honored by the United States government with a commission as a brigadier-general.

Reports from the island of Mindanao for the past three months have been merely a succession of announcements of victories of Capt. Pershing's command over the natives. These reports have brought the Missourian's exceptionally successful campaign against an unusually difficult foe conspicuously before the public and the authorities at Washington.

The suggestion that he be rewarded, as Frederick Funston of Kansas was, with a brigadier generalship, has already been made and, while it naturally provoked protests from other army officers, there is nevertheless a possibility that it may be acted upon, particularly if Capt. Pershing carries out his grim determination to subdue the entire island before he quits fighting the dattoes and their subjects.

Prior to the advent of Capt. Pershing's force in Mindanao most unfavorable reports were received from that Moro stronghold. Declarations of fierce hostility were made by the dattoes. They refused all offers of friendliness from American officers.

Once Boastful Dattoes Routed.

Since Capt. Pershing began his campaign no proud boasts have been heard from them. Instead the dispatches have carried from day to day accounts of the number of Moros routed and forts destroyed.

The last report, May 7, announced that Capt. Pershing had recently reduced ten forts and administered a severe defeat to the Bacolodian Moros near Lake Lanao, killing 115, with a loss of only two of his own soldiers.

Eastern newspapers are commenting on the fact that he is a Missourian and that the Moros will have to "show" him. One New York writer says:

"That particularly strenuous and equally efficient officer, Capt. John J. Pershing, continues to impress his personality upon the Moros in a way that must convince them that times have changed since the days when the only white men they knew were more than content to let them alone on few other conditions than that of being let alone in turn. Capt. Pershing has different ideas and carries them out in gay disregard of the ancient legends that the Moros are a very terrible people and invincible on their own ground. With almost no losses among his own men, he attacks and defeats them whenever necessity—or is it opportunity?—to do so arises, and after each battle he offers peace and friendship. The Moros will accept these offers after a while, for refusal has proved to be very wearing on the resources of the tribes."

Capt. Pershing is a real Missourian. He was born in Missouri and appointed to West Point from Missouri. In the army and navy register he is credited to Missouri.

He was born in Linn County in about 1864. His parents resided at Laclede, a town on the Burlington about 20 miles from Brookfield, the county seat. He was appointed to West Point in 1872.

In 1876 he was graduated from West Point and chose the cavalry service, being assigned to the Sixth cavalry as a second lieutenant. In 1892 he was promoted to a first lieutenancy and transferred to the Tenth cavalry.

He received his captaincy Feb. 2, 1901, and was assigned to the First Cavalry. In August, 1901, he was transferred to the Fifteenth Cavalry. He went to the Philippines with the Fifteenth in command of "A" Troop.

He is senior captain of the regiment and will receive his promotion probably within a year, unless an elevation to a brigadier-generalship should render this unnecessary.

He has a brother, Ward B. Pershing, also born in Missouri, who is a first lieutenant in the Fourth Cavalry. Their mother now resides in Chicago at 357 East Fifty-third street.

RYAN TRIES TO GIVE HIMSELF UP

Walked Into the Carr Street Police Station and Introduced Himself.

John J. ("Baldy") Ryan, the alleged assailant of John J. McGillicuddy ("Cuddy Mack"), walked into the Carr street police station Saturday morning and announced that he had come to surrender.

"I heard I was wanted," said he to Desk Sergeant McFarland. "And I'm ready to surrender. I'm John J. Ryan."

McFarland looked him over curiously and then studied his desk a minute.

"Well, I don't know as I want you," he replied. "I haven't got any charge against you. Cuddy Mack refused to prosecute you."

"All right," said Ryan. "I just heard that I was wanted."

McFarland asked no questions and Ryan left the station.

He is under bond to appear before Judge Ryan of the Circuit Court Monday and answer six indictments for obtaining money under false pretenses. The indictments are the result of the operations of the John J. Ryan Turf Investment Co.

The police believe his return to St. Louis is to answer those charges. His attack on "Cuddy Mack" took place two weeks ago in Mack's saloon, at Sixth street and Franklin avenue.

"Cuddy Mack" received a severe beating in the fight. He kept in hiding several days, presumably nursing his wounds, and when he appeared was swathed in bandages.

"Cuddy Mack" and "Baldy" Are Pals.

"He's an old friend of mine and a corking good fellow," declared John J. ("Baldy") Ryan Saturday morning, discussing Constable John J. McGillicuddy ("Cuddy Mack").

"I haven't a word to say about the trouble we had. It's all over now and I'll have to be excused from talking about it."

"I came out of it all right, though," he added when someone suggested that he didn't look any the worse from the encounter. "I've been in tight places before and got out all right, and I expect to be able to do it again."

"I surrendered as soon as I reached town this morning," said Ryan to the Post-Dispatch, "but they told me there was no charge against me and I was released.

"I will stay here a while now, as I am due Monday to answer an indictment against me in connection with my turf investment company."

Ryan called at the Federal building Saturday morning to see United States Marshal Morsey, who is distributing the $193,000 turned over by Ryan to the stockholders of his investment company.

Ryan has reorganized the company and issued new stock certificates to all who were stockholders at the time of the crash.

THREE INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Chouteau Avenue Car Leaves Track and Passengers Are Thrown From Seats.

Two women and one man were injured in a street car accident on the Chouteau avenue line Friday night. Those injured were Mrs. Irene Jones of 1421 Walnut street, East St. Louis; Mrs. Cordes of 1230 Dolman street, St. Louis, and John Cain, who declined to give an address.

The car jumped the track at Twentieth street, throwing the passengers from their seats into the aisle.

Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Cordes sustained severe bruises about the head and body, and Cain's hand was cut by broken glass.

The injured persons were able to go to their homes, after being treated by Dr. Louis Schnghart.

CHINESE ROUTS NEGRO BURGLARS

When Jo Way's Queue Is Shot Off, His Naval Spirit Is Aroused.

SURPRISED BY 3 NEGROES, JO ADVANCES UNDER FIRE

Chinese Cook Who Had Been "Behind the Gun" Protects the Koehler Home, Then Asks Assistance to Telephone.

One Chinese came off victorious in a pistol duel with three negro burglars at the home of Hugo Koehler, 5346 Maple avenue, Friday night.

The burglars were driven away empty-handed, and two of them were wounded, accordinn to Jo Way, the Chinese.

"Me hlitee him; Me know it. Hlear him holler," said Jo to the police, in telling his story.

In their haste, at any rate, the negroes left a part of their professional aquipment, including a sponge, saturated with chloroform, a paper of red pepper, a jimmy, a rope, a candle and a black slouch hat.

Jo Way and Ling Yooey are Chinese cooks employed at Mr. Koehler's house.

For several days the Chinese have been in complete possession of the house, as the family is in San Francisco. They were left in charge with instructions to see that nothing went wrong.

Jo Way, who slept on the third floor, was awakened about 11 o'clock Friday night by the noise of some one walking downstairs. He got up quietly, and, taking his revolver from under his pillow, crept softly down the two flights of stairs to the first floor. He peered through every door and transom in the darkness as he descended, but did not see a sign of a burglar.

Then, revolver in hand, he walked out the front door and around the house. On the walk at the side of the house, he came face to face with a negro.

Before Jo could speak or shoot, the negro had drawn his revolver, and sent a bullet whizzing so close to Jo's head that it took a little hair and skin with it.

The negro ran. Jo Way didn't. He stood still and fired at the retreating figure. After the negro had disappeared at top speed, Jo walked on around the house and pretty soon saw two more negroes crouching beneath the porch at the rear.

This time he was first with his revolver, and opened a close range fire on the burglars. They returned it at the same time [illegible]. The bullets whistled close [illegible] he stood his ground and emptied his revolver at the fleeing men.

"Me hitt 'em, me hlear 'em holler," says Jo.

Jo served six years in the United States navy and there as one of the "men behind the guns," learned how to shoot straight and keep cool under fire.

After the burglars had disappeared he stopped two men and a woman who were passing, and asked one of them to come inside the house and telephone the police for him.

"Me no use plone," said Jo.

The police arrived in about half an hour. In the meantime Jo had made an inventory of the house and found nothing missing. In the yard, however, he discovered the tools left by the burglars.

Ling Yooey was not at home during the night, arriving there at midnight. He had been spending the evening with Chinese friends.

Jo told the police thathe believed the negroes had made previous attempts to enter the house since he has been in charge of it. He said he had been compelled to keep wacth every night and was not asleep when they made the attempt Friday night.

A few nights before, he said, he had seen a negro in the yard and had ordered him away. Friday night, he declared, was the first for a week that he had not spent in the kitchen downstairs with his revolver handy.

Way says one negro was shot in the shoulder and another in the leg. He describes one of them as 5 feet 8 inches tall and slim and the other as 5 feet 6 inches tall. The third negro he is unable to describe.

COUNCIL TOOK NO ACTION

Two Views of Terminal Association's Application for Ordinances Were Presented.

After John Schroers, H. L. Christie, Frank N. Johnson and others, representing the Business Men's League, had appealed to the City Council Friday afternoon to pass the Terminal Association ordinances as soon as possible, Councilman Boyce read a report setting forth just how the Terminal Association had violated the privileges already extended it by the city.

H. L. Christie made the chief address, reviewing the differences between the ordinances prepared and what the business organizations thought they should be and urged the adoption of the amendment offering the open door to all new railroads.

Mr. Schroers said that the Terminal Association was willing to pay $250,000 in a lump sum for the privileges extended in the new ordinances and that they must be passed by the middle of June to relieve the congestion that was sure to come if the World's Fair traffic set in with the present railroad accommodations.

No action was taken by the council.

SYBIL SANDERSON DEAD; FAMOUS OPERA SINGER

SYBIL SANDERSON.

Sudden Attack of Pneumonia, Following Grip, Proved Fatal in Paris.

PARIS, May 16.—Sybil Sanderson, the well-known American opera singer, died suddenly today of pneumonia resulting from an attack of the grip.

The announcement of the death of the famous artist caused a profound shock in the American colony here, where she was well known, and throughout musical and theatrical circles. She returned to Paris from Nice six weeks ago, suffering from a slight attack of the grip. Her condition was not regarded as serious, but she gradually grew worse and her sickness finally developed into pneumonia.

The doctors continued to hold out hopes of her recovery but the singer sank and finally succumbed this morning.

Miss Sanderson's mother, the widow of Judge Sanderson of California, with whom she lived in apartments at 1 Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, and other relatives and friends were present at the time of her death, including her sisters, Edith and Marion, and Mary Garden of Chicago, the soprano of the Opera Comique.

Miss Sanderson, according to report, was to have been married this summer to Conut Paul Tolstoi, a cousin of the Russian novelist.

The funeral of Miss Sanderson will take place here Monday.

Miss Garden said Miss Sanderson, who had been unconscious since Thursday evening, and had suffered great pain, regained her senses before death came, although she passed away quietly in her sleep.

Sibyl Sanderson was a Californienne. She was the daughter of a judge of the supreme court of her state, and she was one of the beauties of San Francisco before she was 16. She was a massive girl, who knew better than anybody else the radiant loveliness of her classical face, and heroic figure. She sang wonderfully, even then, and was not shy of displaying either her talents or her beauty. They have a little Paris of their own out there on the Pacific coast, and when Miss Sanderson found herself in Paris she already knew what the admiration of well-dressed, clever men meant.

There never was any lack of self-assertion about Sibyl Sanderson from the time she used to climb in a chair in the public school and sing for the teachers and her fellow pupils at recess. The teachers used to have her sing for visitors, so when she left school and began to know things that are not taught there she was a thoroughly self-possessed girl. She knew she was a striking young person, and she liked to defy conventionalities, to sing songs she was young enough to pretend she did not understand, and tell stories the points of which she might with her fair, fresh, young face be reasonably sure most people would think she did not see. She was very well known by the time she was 16 or 17, but she did not attain general prominence outside her own set—which was not her mother's set—until she fell in love with a third-rate Italian tenor belonging to Mapleson's company. It took a genius to become engaged to a man to whom she could not speak a word, for she was ignorant of any language he understood, and he spoke no tongue she knew. This tenor—his name was Carlinela—claimed to be a nobleman, and Sibyl's family said he could have her if he could prove right to his title. He couldn't do it, so Cardinela escaped becoming famous as the husband of a great singer.

In time Miss Sanderson went to Paris to have that wonderful voice developed. She really studied hard, and maybe it was because she was so beautiful she became a pupil of the great Massenet. Massenet was as great an expert on womanly loveliness as he was on voices. If he made love to his pupil he also educated her. He made her a prima donna, and finally wrote two operas for her. Her fame was made with her first appearance. Then Saint Saens, another great composer, wrote "Phryne" for her, and Europe went mad about her. Triumph after triumph she scored.

She was entranced with her art, so much so that when the characters demanded it—and it usually did—she did not demur at displaying her physical as well as her vocal gifts.

Conquest after conquest she made. Prince Baldwin of Belgium was the first royal victim to her charms. He died mysteriously and tragically at Brussels, and Europe made her the heroine of the tragedy.

Royalty became commonplace to her after a while.

At St. Petersburg, for instance, she sang to the royal family. At the performance she was invited to visit the Czar's private box. Afterward she attended a dinner given by the Grand Duke Vladimir, where she met the Crown Prince Nicholas, now Czar of Russia.

Her career had been a triumphal march over broken hearts. She was used to having men kill themselves for love of her.

Not long ago all Europe gossiped about the infatuation of Czar Nicholas II for the American opera singer. Royalty and nobility were sorry for the Czarina, who remained in retirement while her imperial spouse was almost every night at the theater listening to Miss Sibyl Sanderson. When a Czar makes presents they are worth while, and Nicholas never disguised his admiration for the beautiful singer.

Then came her romance with Don Antonio Terry, the Cuban millionaire, whom she married in 1897. Two years later Terry died, leaving his widow the bulk of a $20,000,000 estate.

SLAIN BECAUSE HE WORE A SILK HAT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 16.—A high silk hat, probably the first ever worn in the small town of Fagan, west of Houston, was responsible for the death of Philip Buntz.

The victim was traveling for a Bible publishing house in the East.

His attire was that of a clergyman. When he appeared in Fagan he was the center of attraction. That night he was set upon by a crowd of drunken cowboys and mortally wounded.

The trouble took place in one of the saloons of the town. Buntz walked up to the bar where the cowboys were drinking and ordered a lemonade. The bartender repeated the order in a tone of voice sufficiently loud for all in the crowded barroom to hear.

One of the cowboys insulted the wearer of the silk hat. The remark was resented and some one threw a lariat over the shining mark.

Buntz showed fight and was set upon. In the melee he was struck over the head with a sixshooter, suffering a fracture of the skull. He never recovered consciousness.

Letters on his person signed "your sister" and post-marked New York, in which reference was made to the residence of the deceased in that city, were found.

Buntz was in Houston lately and from this city made preparations for a trip into the cattle country far from [illegible] of trade.

FEUDIST SLAYER OF 20 MEN HELD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORTON, Va., May 16.—Clifton Branham, aged 42 years, for many years one of eastern Kentucky's most desperate outlaws who has been connected with every feud war that disgraced the mountain section of the "blue grass state," was surprised this morning at White House, a railroad station, by Sheriff Abe Little of Floyd County, and a posse of ten deputies.

A desperate fight followed. The man was seriously wounded and at length gave up.

Branham's last exploits were in the Cockrell-Hargis feud in Breathitt County, Branham being on the Hargis side of the feud.

In his career, at least 20 men have been his victims.

Three weeks ago he murdered old man Hensly Moore, on the Floyd-Breathitt border, whom he shot from ambush.

After old man Moore's body was buried, Branham walked to the cemetery and fired shot after shot into the grave.

JEW-BAITING IN THE MIDDLE AGES OUTDONE

Present Russian Cruelties to Race Have No Counterpart in Persecutions of the Olden Times.

OVER 1000 VICTIMS OF ONE MOB'S FURY

Kishineff Massacre Started by Story That Robbers Killed Christian to Get Blood for Ritualistic Purposes.

INCITING CAUSE.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Letters from Kishineff to relatives here give horrible details of the massacre.

The inciting cause was told in two of the letters. It seems that the body of a Gentile boy was found in the Jewish quarter, and the Russians heard that the boy's blood was to be used by the Jews in preparing their Passover bread.

FULL OF PATHOS.

The editor of the Jewish Daily Herald gave a translation of a letter he had received from Israel Solomon Magasimer of Kishineff, through Magasimer's brother, who lives at 29 Franklin street, Norwich, Conn. The letter tells of the massacre and recites details of the murder of Magasimer's friends.

"Do you remember Simon, the teacher?" asked the letter; "he is dead. So is his wife, Miriam. So are his three children, among whom was Judith, who at least stabbed the ruffian. I have seen her dead face. I could see there a smile of triumph. Peace be with her.

"I refrained from mentioning our sister, Freda, the poor widow. I cannot write much of her. She and her two babies are dead. They died with the others."

BERLIN, May 16.—Reports received from Kishineff say that during three days' massacre of the Jews, 48 persons were killed outright, 80 have since died of their wounds and upwards of 1000 were injured.

Nine children were murdered in a horrible manner. One child was found with its body split in two. Most injuries were inflicted with pieces of furniture and heavy sticks, such was the fury of the crowd that many of the bodies were unrecognizable. The Tageblatt publishes a special dispatch from Kishineff which says:

"On the evening of the second day Russian doctors who were moved to pity by the horrors they had witnessed, drove to a distant station and sent a telegram to St. Petersburg informing the authorities of what was happening.

"The murderers and robbers were well organized. The attack had evidently been carefully planned. They worked in groups of eight and ten.

"The total number of the murderers did not exceed 300, whereas there were 5000 soldiers and 300 police in the city.

"The military and police calmly looked on while the atrocities were being committed, making not the slightest attempt to stop them. They gladly accepted many a good piece of loot thrown to them by the ruffians.

"In some cases the barbarous wretches took their time over their awful work. One band in particular took possession of the dwelling of a Je win good circumstances, and which promised to yield valuable plunder, and leisurely killed and robbed.

"The cut-throats murdered the mistress of the house and subjected her daughter to a worse fate.

The band then turned its attention to the safe, in which the owner had deposited his whole fortune. In the meantime the head of the house was drifting from one police station to another, seeking official after official, entreating vainly for help and protection.

Looked Vainly for Aid for Ten Hours.

"The members of the gang worked at the safe for ten hours before they were able to open it, and, during all that time, the owner could not find a single officer of the law or the military who would give him aid.

"One Jewish manufacturer saved his property in a very simple manner. Shortly after the looting began he called to a captain of cossacks who was passing and presented him with 1500 rubles (about $[illegible]). The captain immediately sent twenty cossacks to guard the manufacturer's house and his property was untouched, al[illegible] every other Jewish place [illegible] the neighborhood was [illegible] erty that [illegible] not [illegible] drenched w[illegible] An appe[illegible]

Kishineff are more awful than those inflicted during the middle ages. The crowd, excited by the lie of ritual murder, fell upon the Jews, and for two days plundered, burned and murdered them with impunity.

Attack Carefully Prepared Beforehand.

"The attack was carefully prepared beforehand, and it was executed on the Easter festival with the connivance of the authorities.

"Widows and orphans are bewailing their breadwinners, and thousands of families are reduced to beggary."

A Kishineff newspaper, that for several years has been carrying on a persistent campaign against the 50,000 Jews that make up a third of the population, succeeded in convincing its readers that the Jews had murdered a young Russian Christian for the purpose of using his blood for ritualistic purposes during the Easter celebration. An eyewitness thus describes what followed:

"On Monday morning, April 20, while passing down Michallow street, I met a crowd of riotous youths, led by several older men. They stopped before the shop of a Jewish grocer and, beating on the door, demanded admission.

"The frantic cries for help by the inmates were received with jibes, while the door was battered down. Every small article of value in the house was stolen and everything else was thrown into the middle of the street.

Awful Work of the Mob.

"Four o'clock found every Jewish house and shop in the street a complete wreck. The shouts and yells of the rioters mingled with the shrieks and wails of their victims.

"Bodies beaten beyond recognition, children whose limbs had been torn from them, women and girls who were subjected to a dreadful fate before death came to their relief—these human victims were mingled with the broken furniture, the whole being covered with ripped up feather mattresses which had been slashed open in the hunt for money and valuables.

"Many Jewish householders endeavored to escape the attention of the fanatical murderers by placing crucifixes and other Christian emblems in their windows, but there was always some one, frequently it was a policeman or a soldier, to point out where the Jews lived and none on that street escaped."

Another eye-witness says that one plundering, murdering band was made up of young men evidently in good circumstances who were led by officials in uniform.

"This band," he reports, "worked with deadly energy and fiendish cruelty. They went from house to house, from store to shop, and wherever they found a Jewish family they plundered, maimed and killed.

Babes Flung From Upper Stories.

"Children were flung headlong from upper story windows and when one struck head foremost and met instant death the murderer was applauded.

"Women, young and old, were subjected to the most frightful indignities that could be inflicted upon them—and this on the public street, in full view of the crowds.

"Some women, who offered resistence to the horrible brutes, were first overcome and then their eyes were gouged out. The men were killed in the most brutal manner. Many had their brains beaten out and others met more horrible deaths.

"I witnessed the persecution of the Jews in Kieff in 1882, but it was nothing in comparison with the awful cruelties perpetrated here. The deeds I witnessed were so horrible that they never can be printed in detail and the outside world can have no real conception of the horrors of those three days of terror.

"Every one in Kishineff is of the opinion that the murderers will not be brought to justice, or that, at the most, they will receive only a nominal punshment."

COUNT CASSINI ON OUTRAGES ON JEWS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, said today:

"The reports that the Russian government was in any way connected with the riots are absolutely untrue. From my own knowledge of the way Russian news is sent to this country, I am certain that these reports have been grossly exaggerated.

"As to the Jews themselves, there is no feeling against them among the educated Russians. We admire them for their greatness and their financial ability.

"Many of the bankers in Russia are Jews. There are, however, 4,500,000 Jews in Russia, and many of them are of the lower order. The Jews are not an agricultural people—they are merchants. The result is, as soon as they accumulate a few dollars, the Jews go into the business of buying, selling and lending.

"Their customers are the peasantry and their exactions are such that the peasantry becomes incensed. This feeling against the Jews of this type is not found in Russia alone. It is found in many other parts of the world. When it comes to a head, anti-Semitic riots are results. The Russian government deplores these riots, but the government cannot change the temper of the people. It can only suppress the disturbances, and it does that with the utmost rigor.

"So far as the reports now being printed concerning the occurrences of a few weeks are concerned, I repeat that, in my opinion, they are grossly exaggerated. It is sometimes so in Russian papers concerning occurrences in this country. I have [illegible] printed in Russian papers accounts [illegible] lynchings in this country that would [illegible] it seem to the reader that lynchings [illegible] everywhere.

NEW YORK, May 16.—During the ten days that collections have been made in the United States for the immediate assistance of the sufferers in the religious riots of Kishineff, Russia, about $50,000 has been subscribed to the relief fund.

RUSSIA PUNISHES JEW PERSECUTORS

ST. PETERSBURG, May 16.—The majority of the persons arrested for participating in the anti-Semitic outrages at Kishineff have been tried and sentenced to varying punishments.

Although they were mostly arrested on returning to their homes after the second day's pillage with their arms full of plunder, all the prisoners protested their innocence and pleaded that they found the things in the streets and were taking them to the police station.

DO NOT WANT NAME CHANGED.

Pupils of Cote Brilliante School Protest Against Calling It the Eads.

Pupils and patrons of the Cote Brilliante school are circulating a petition protesting against the proposed change of the name of the school to the James B. Eads school, in memory of the builder of the bridge.

The suggestion of change was made at a meeting of the school board Tuesday night by Prof. Calvin M. Woodward of Washington University.

The pupils are leading the opposition. As soon as they heard of the proposition they investigated, and when they found it was true, they held indignation meetings and started petitions.

They talked the matter over at their homes, and their parents sided with them. The alumni of the school are also said to be opposed to the change, which would make them alumni without an alma mater.

SPRING VACATION IN YOUR OWN BACK YARD

Now for a spring vacation!

How would you like to see, pictorially represented, just what Mr. Francis wore when he met King Edward? How would you like to know just how it came about that the president of the World's Fair was induced to don the court costume of Great Britain? An entertaining account of the celebrated Missourian at King Edward's court, more vitally interesting to this vicinity than Mark Twain's amusing tale of a Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's court, will be published in tomorrow's Sunday Post-Dispatch.

A notable picture was taken by the World's Fair official photographer a day or two after the close of the dedication ceremonies. It shows a man on horseback—a military man, an American general, Frederick Dent Grant. Gen. Grant was mounted in front of the log house built by the first Gen. Grant, his illustrious father, where, as litle Fred, the present general lived several years, in St. Louis County. This picture is reproduced, with an account of Gen. Grant's visit to this historic house, in tomorrow's Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Who is the first "lady commissioner" to the World's Fair—not the first in point of importance, but in point of appointment? This question is now being discussed among World's Fair people, and is of intimate interest to the ladies. The Sunday Post-IDspatch will contain a likeness of a handsome woman in the East whose friends claim for her this distinction. There is a handsome western woman, however, whose friends dispute the claim.

Oh, to flee and find a flea,
Where the fleeing fleas have flown!
Who will flee afar with me,
By the fleeing breezes blown?
Fortune flees, but flees are known
That are fortune fleas, forsooth,
And by finding one you own
Wealth galore, O happy youth!

Five thousand dollars reward is offered for a flea. Think of that, ye seekers after fortune. But the man who makes this offer is particular as to the sort of flea. He is fastidious in his flea tastes, and will have only one kind; none others need apply. The Sunday Post-Dispatch tells of this remarkable offer.

There are slugs and sluggers, but the California gold slug of '49, the $50 octagonal slug, is the champion. Numismatists all over the world seek these California pioneer coins, which are worth so much more than their face value that they have been out of circulation many years. The Sunday Post-Dispatch gives the interesting history and the present no less interesting status of these gold pieces, with an enlarged picture of one, so that he who runs may read the inscription thereon.

One of the features that may enliven "The Pike" at the World's Fair is a curious revolving roof garden, newly invented by an enterprising St. Louisan. This is a mighty advance on the merry-go-round, the razzle-dazzle and amusement enterprises of that ilk; it is unique. Read about it and see an illustration of the device in the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

"New and Strange Things in and About St. Louis" is a regular page feature of the Sunday Post-Dispatch that embraces each Sunday a dozen or more illustrated up-to-date, entertaining stories. Look for a famous Kentucky firearm in tomorrow's issue, a picture of Joe Jefferson drawn by M[illegible] the first Missourian, and an [illegible] emblem for the [illegible] St. Louisan.

PRESENTATION OF FOLK LOVING CUP

Committee of Eight Called on the Circuit Attorney Saturday Morning.

PRESENTATION SPEECH MADE BY J. Y. PALLEN

After Three Cheers Had Been Given for Mr. Folk He Made a Speech of Acceptance of the Token.

The committee appointed to present to Circuit Attorney Folk the solid silver loving cup purchased with a fund contributed through the Post-Dispatch, by the people of St. Louis, called at the Four Courts in a body Saturday morning and the gift was presented.

The committee was composed of eight prominent business men. James Y. Pallen, westbound agent of the West Shore railroad, acted as spokesman, the other members of the committee being James F. Coyle, director of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co.; J. S. Goodfellow, president of the Goodfellow Shoe Co.; W. A. Zukoski of the Levis-Zukoski Mercantile Co.; J. H. Roblee, vice-president of the Brown Shoe Co.; C. W. Gauss of the Gauss-Langenburg Hat Co.; H. Brinsmade of the King-Brinsmade Mercantile Co., and William H. Stix of the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., and W. H. Bierman of the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co.

The committee entered Mr. Folk's private office unannounced, taking the circuit attorney by surprise. After shaking hands with each member of the committee, Mr. Folk inquired to what he was indebted for the visit. Mr. Pallen made the presentation. He spoke as follows:

"his comittee has been appointed to present to you the loving cup purchased with a fund contributed by voluntary subscriptions of the people of this city. It is proper to say that no large subscriptions were received, the amounts subscribed coming largely in nickels, dimes and quarters, so that the fund represents the spontaneous offering of several thousand contributors.

"We present this cup to you, Mr. Folk, as an evidence of the hearty approval which is given you by the law-abiding people of this city.

"We present it as an evidence of their earnest commendation of your course in resisting the threats of the law-breakers, as well as the less aggressive, but none the less cupable, efforts of their influential friends, to divert your course so that corruption could continue, and the few be allowed to prosper at the expense of the many.

"You have exemplified, by your faithful services, that 'he state has rights,' a fact which seems to bave had little consideration during recent years just past.

"We appreciate the many difficulties you have encountered in your determined and efficient efforts to bring criminals to justic—and w assur you that th good popl of this city, and the good people of this state commend your work, and heartily approve your course.

"Your name has become known throughout our nation, and the State of Missouri is honored today by reason of your work. he people of this great state will nt be slow to evidence their appreciation of your fitness for exalted executive position, and are now only waiting for an opportunity to say, 'Well done, faithful servant; go up higher.'

At the conclusion of Mr. Pallen's address, Mr. Stix suggested three cheers for the circuit attorney, which were given by the committee.

Wehn the cheering had subsided, Mr. Folk responded.

Gentlemen of the committee: This token is appreciated, not for its intrinsic worth, but for the sentiment that prompts its presentation. I shall always treasure it for its sentimental value, as well as an evidence of the approval of good citizens of efforts being made to bring about a better condition in municipal and state affairs. I receive it as a message of encouragement and cheer from those who would have civic virtue triumphant, and who worship honor more than greed.

I observe engraved on the cup this quotation: "The man who violates the law is not a democrat, he is not a republican—he is a criminal." A disregard of this truth breeds corruption. Political affiliation cannot be a vicarious atonement for crime. He who plunders the people is no less a criminal by reason of political belief or religious creed. Officials are not elected to prosecute only political opponents, but to enforce the law impartially against all offenders. The prosecutor who uses his office to punish enemies, or reward friends abuses the trust reposed in him. One of the rights of the state is to have the laws impartially enforced against all offenders, be tehy high or low, rich or poor.

As strange as it may seem, the state has some rights. We hear much of the rights of an accused, but nothing at all of the rights of the public. The object of punishing crime is to protect society, and when we come to the point where the stat has no rights in the proceedings, and the defendant all, then the criminal statutes might as well be repealed. A defendant should be accorded every right due by justice and by law, but the rights of the state should not be lost sight of in doing so. The rights of theaccused are sacred, and should be zealously guarded, but the rights of the public are likewise sacred and should be carefullyl defended. Public plunderers scoff at the rights of the public, and hold public statutes in contempt—unless they are given some right by a statute, then that statute is to them a sacred thing to be used as a cloak for their villainy.

The touch of the unclean dollar has contaminated our legislative halls. The cupidity of conscienceless public servants and the extent of the venality existing among sworn maker of the law is alarming. Such conditions as have been exposed here will not be tolerated by a self-respecting free people. Such is the insolence of corruptionists that even now we hear them tauntingly demand of the people, "What are you going to do about it?" With the good people of Missouri united the corruptionists will be buried under an avalanche of civic righteousness. It takes two to make a bargain, and corrupt men cannot retain full power for evil without the consent of the people.

The campaign against public plunderers who have attempted to prostitute the functions of the state to their own vicious ends is well under way. The fight is on, and every citizen must march either under the flag of decency or the banner of iniquity. No middle ground is possible, for there can be no compromise for corruption. Those who oppose exposure and prosecution of public evil are enemies to the public good. The result of the battle between good and evil ought not to be in doubt. It cannot be if good citizens are alive to the responsibilities resting upon them in this important epoch in the history of our state. Will the corruptionists rule or will the people rule? The people are supreme and can answer.

A time like this demands stout hearts, clean minds and good men who live above the fog in public duty and in private thinking. Such men I take you to be, and with this cup let us pledge unrelenting warfare against the enemies of the public weal and patriotic devotion to the material and moral welfare of our state, so rich in the past, so glorious in hopes of the future.

GOV. PENNYPACKER HOIST BY HIS OWN LIBEL-LAW PETARD

Referred to Cartoonist Nelan as an "Outcast" and Must Apologize or Answer Libel Suit.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—Chales Nelan, cartoonist, has addressed a long letter to Gov. Pennypacker in which he complains of the use of the word "outcast" in the governor's letter on the libel bill as applied to the maker of one of Mr. Nelan's drawings. Mr. Nelan demands a prompt apology, failing to receive which, he gives notice, he will bring suit against the governor for libel. He says in the letter: "I beg to say to you, sir, that when you applied this epithet to me you uttered an unqualified falsehood. I am not an 'outcast;' I am not a 'vagabond.' If you will not retract, but will agree not to plead the privilege of your position as a defense to the wrong you have done me, I will institute proceedings against you within five days and will hurry the case to trial with the utmost expedition, so the jury in the courts and the larger jury of the people may know whether I am the 'outcast' you have stigmatized me or whether you are a slanderer and libeler of an honest citizen."

DRYDEN EVADES "PRESS MUZZLER"

An Alleged Account of a Reported Ball Game Evades Libel Law.

Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania recently signed a stringent libel law, or "press muzzler," the provisions of which, construed strictly, make it dangerous to print almost any direct statement.

Charles Dryden, sporting editor of the Philadelphia North American, who accompanies the Athletics on their baseball tours, took no chances in reporting the Philadelphia-Chicago game played in the City by the Lake. Here is his conservative, cautious, careful and somewhat confusing report:

BY CHARLES DRYDEN.

NEAR A LARGE LAKE, ON THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF WHAT IS SAID TO BE MONTH.

Owing to the rumor that an alleged governor is declared to have signed what is thought to be a bill, it is currently believed we find ourselves up against it. Should the feelings of any person be bruised he can slam the hooks into our alleged bank account and collect for libel. Say, wouldn't that ferment your supposed breakfast food?

Some time during the day, it is understood, a number of persons engaged in what he have heard was an altercation with a ball. One side is believed to have got the better of the other. One party, alleged to be champions, met in a supposed lot with another crowd under suspicion of knowing something of similar difficulties in the past.

From all accounts the suspects knew too much, and from reliable sources we are assured that they remain in a position thought to be widely separated from the alleged bottom. Also it is believed and partly confirmed that the champions are not glad they are said to have gone over the high jumps.

Alleged Clouds, Alleged Appearance.

The figures were reported to be 9 and 3. Competent eyewitnesses, many of whom are thought to have been sober, aver that the sun appeared to be saining at the time. Danger lurks in every line of this statement. Though he spells it differently, old Sol may be the same kind of a son as the alleged governor, and they might get together, it is said, and pull off a libel suit.

Every now and then what seemed to be a cloud was understood to have been noticed in the alleged sky not a great way from this place. Among the reputed champions was a large person, thought to be more or less young, who was long suspected of being left-handed. Reputable persons of undoubted veracity are willing to make what is said to be an oath that he seemed to be using what looked like his left hand.

From time to time, so it is declared, he went through the apparent motions of alleged pitching. The reputed ball, we are given to understand, was round, or nearly so, and was covered with what at a great distance appeared to be leather.

The act of skinning an alleged horse hurts his feelings, it is said, and it is thought to be difficult, as well as dangerous, to monkey too much with the suspected covering.

In the second stage of the altercation, what is thought to be noise came from an unroofed portion of the alleged lot. The rumor cannot be verified at this writing. The result of this alleged noise is said to have frightened things having the aspect of bats from the belfry of the eccentric left-hander, supposed to be twirling for the alleged champions.

Alleged Blond Appears in Game.

It is claimed he at once started to propel the ball, or one that resembled it, at the queer things buzzing about his alleged head. Reports of the affair state that he at once left the scene. In his stead appeared a young man thought to be a blond, from one of the states that was once accused, we are told, of producing what looked like wooden nutmegs.

With the alleged blond person came another who is said to be some sort of a medical practitioner. They were of small avail, it is so reported, in an alleged effort to check the apparent ill treatment of what are thought to be champions. Another individual among the suspects, whose arm is believed to be on the wrong side, caused the Champions to resemble an alleged dollar from which 70 cents are supposed to have been abstracted. His name is thought to be the opposite of black. It is said he Pennypackered the alleged champions.

At an alleged period of time, believed to have been four days ago, the two supposed left-handed persons alluded to met in a similar affair, and it is rumred that the one who flew the coop today was thought to be the whole cheese on the former occasion.

Near the base, that is not first or second, there appeared for the alleged champions an individual who, it is claimed, should make an effort to unpigeon his socalled toes before the habit becomes too firmly fixed. It is generally believed that if he had but one leg this individual would of necessity be compelled to run rings around what is thought to be himself. He is believed to hold a high official position. Though he worked hard, he was unable to inspire the needful quantity of what is said to be ginger.

An alleged disturbing element is believed to have stood on what looked like feet a short distance behind what is said to have been the plate. He seemed to be breathing most of the time, and there is faint ground for the alleged belief that he possesses almost human intelligence. It is rumored that he has been known to resemble a certain deep sea creature that is believed to turn red when thought to be boiled in alleged hot water. There was nothing in the conduct of this individual, it is said, that interfered in any way with the alleged efforts of the champions. At no time, we are informed, were they under suspicion of doing anything intended to annoy or irritate the suspects.

Rumor has it that an alleged Indian supposed to be connected in some way with these affairs has made what is said to be a purchase. The price is understood to be ten less than fifty. What appears to pass for a diamond in the purchase, which seems to be round, is thought to be almost as large as an alleged mustard seed. It is further suspected and borne out by his reputed conduct that the alleged Indian is not sorry.

It would be too risky to tell anything specific about the alleged conflict. The appended score was compiled by a misanthrope who committed suicide as soon as he completed it, and hence is beyond the ire of the governor. It is hoped the latter will not suppress the paper for printing it, or draw and quarter the writer for sending it.

RACE WAR RAGES IN MISSISSIPPI

White Planter Reported Fatally Shot and Several Negroes Killed.

LAUREL, Miss., May 16.—A race war has broken out near Burns, Smith County.

The whites there are up in arms and are whipping and killing negroes, wherever they find them.

One white man is reported to have been mortally wounded and several negroes are said to have been killed.

The trouble started by a negro leaving a crop which he had planted for white farmers.

The farmers gathered some of their neighbors about them and went after the negro.

On their way to where the negro was, the party was ambushed, the negroes firing into them, and Mr. Craft, a farmer, was mortally wounded.

The white men returned the fire and the negroes fled, the whites pursuing them.

The riot began Tuesday and it is said that the enraged white men of the community are still in the saddle searching for the negro who instigated the trouble.

Only meager details have been received here.

HIGHBALLS AT WOMAN'S CLUB?

Prospective Member Says She Supposes a Woman Will Be Able to Get One.

WOMEN TO HAVE CLUB HOUSE LIKE THE MEN

Forty St. Louis society women have held meetings and are making plans to organize a woman's club of St. Louis, which will be on the order of a man's club and will be composed of the leaders of St. Louis society.

One of the women interested in the organization of the club and the establishment of a clubhouse was asked Saturday if it would be like the men's clubs in respect to liquors being obtainable.

"I suppose," she said, "that it will be possible for a woman to get a high ball at the woman's club."

Mrs. James L. Blair has not been elected its president and its organization is not yet complete, but will be so in a short time.

The last meeting was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Julius Walsh, 3628 Delmar boulevard. Mrs. Walsh was not at the meeting because of a previous engagement at the Country Club.

The different women are being discussed for the presidency. Among them is Mrs. Blair, but she does not wish her name used in connection with the office.

The membership of the club will be limited to about 250. It will be impossible for money to buy a membership in it, and yet women without money will not be able to become members because of the expense.

The originators plan to have the best clubhouse in the city. They have come to no conclusion as yet in regard to its location.

The membership will include some out-of-town women, among them the board of lady managers of the World's Fair.

The Woman's Club will be a social club, pure and simple. It will give functions of much splendor. It will entertain the men and women of prominence who visit St. Louis, and its functions will be on a magnificent scale.

It will have no literary features, and in that way will be directly opposite to the Wednesday Club, where a woman cannot become a member unless she has some aptitude in one of the particular lines in which the club is interested.

Members of the Wednesday Club will be eligible to membership in the Woman's Club.

It will have all the advantages of a man's club, and will be most beautifully furnished. It will be by no means a tea room, but one will be able to get a cup of tea there just as at the St. Louis Club.

The club parlors will form a meeting place for women who desire to discuss politics or any subject whatever.

It is said that a lot on Grand avenue, between Morgan and Lucas, now occupied by the old Campbell home, has been given by Mrs. Blair for the home of the club.

Among the 40 women who have attended the meetings for the organization of the club are Mmes. David R. Francis, Norris B. Gregg, Edward Mallinckrodt, William H. Thornburg, Joseph Lucas, J. C. Van Blarcom, Tom Niedringhaus, Ashley D. Scott, Al Shapleigh, George H. Shields, James L. Blair, D. M. Houser, Andy Knapp, Julius Walsh, William H. Barnett, John Fowler, Saunders Foster, John D. Davis, W. E. Fischel.

EMPLOYERS UNITE TO FIGHT UNIONS

WALKING DELEGATES WILL BE BARRED FROM BUILDINGS

Plan of Campaign for Enforcing Principles for Which the Organization tSands Is Being Outlined for Members.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The first move towards effecting a general organization of employers in the building trades for the purpose of offering united resistance to the demands of the labor unions were taken last night at meetings held in Manhattan and Brooklyn. The meeting in Manhattan was held at the Building Trades Club, 700 employers being present, and the throng being so great that overflow meetings were held in the various assembly rooms of the club.

The meeting was in private.

The following resolutions were adopted: "Whereas, the present condition of the building industries makes it imperative that employers shall be made more secure in the conduct of their business, workmen more secure from interference with their opportunity to do their work and the public generally more secure from interruption to business resulting from strikes or lockouts in the building trades, be it

"Resolved, That the board of governors of the Building Trades Association arrange at once for a meeting of the executive committees of the various employers' associations of the building trades to provide ways and means for the creation of a central body of employers."

This committee will be called together next Tuesday. Telegrams were received from similar committees in Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Boston and Washington.

In Brooklyn 100 employers met and formed the employers' league of the borough of Brooklyn. It was resolved to permit no interference with business by any individuals or organizations and that no walking delegates should be permitted to enter any shop during working hours.

Officers were elected and a board of 20 trustees to form a plan of campaign to enforce the principles of the organization and devise means to combat the labor unions, was selected.

A special session of the conciliation committee of the local civic federation was held for the purpose, it was understood, of conferring with representatives of various labor organizations in the city in regard to pending troubles.

KANSAS CITY MAY HAVE LABOR WAR

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16.—A big strike of general trades is threatened in Kansas City, according to the head men of several labor unions and prominent members of the industrial council of this city, who say organized labor is determined to make this a "union town."

Officers of the Employers' Association of Kansas City declare with equal emphasis that the industrial council, or all the trades unions combined, cannot successfully order a general strike.

The unions, backed by the council, are making a special fight now against independent restaurants, and, since the present waiters' strike began, employers in all lines have worked together to prevent boycotts, which have been maintained against nonunion restaurants, bakeries and other trades dealing with nonunion houses.

DENVER CONCERNS TIED UP BY STRIKE

DENVER, Colo., May 16.—The joint executive committee in charge of the strike in this city issued an order at 2 o'clock this morning calling out the members of unions as follows:

Cigarmakers, Papermakers, Pulp and Paper Mill Workers, International Firemen and Engineers at mills, other mill employes, Brewers, Beer Bottlers, Retail Clerks, Lady Clerks, Mattress Makers, Garment Workers, Horseshoers, Electrical Workers, Coopers, Tobacco Strippers, Stage Employes, Barbers, Tailors and Bartenders.

The order became effective at once and through it 2350 additional men are brought into the ranks of the strikers, swelling the number of men now out to something over 5000.

The Building Trades Council has decided not to order a sympathetic strike, but has referred the matter to the union for individual action. Special meetings will be held within the next 24 hours to consider the matter.

The strikers' executive committee has notified the officials of the Western Packing Co. that they would permit a sufficient number of men to remain at work to operate their refrigerating plant, and thus protect the large supply of meat in storage, amounting to several hundred thousand dollars in value.

CIGARETTES WERE SMOKED.

Smoker Followed Election of Officers at Union Club.

Cigarettes may hereafter be smoked by anyone eligible to the use of the Union Club rooms. They were the features of the smoker held in the rooms after the election of officers by the board of directors Friday night.

The new officers are: William A. Giraldin, president; Dr. Eugene F. Hauck, vice-president; Edward Buder, treasurer; Fred A. Beneke, secretary; Otto G. Kalb, assistant secretary and treasurer; Edward Baur, chairman of executive committee; Dr. J. W. Moore, chairman house committee; Joseph A. Ruse, chairman entertainment committee; J. W. Hart, chairman gymnasium committee; E. T. Allen, chairman library committee.

MANUAL'S NINE BROKEN UP.

"Conditions" Bar Several of the Team's Best Players.

Once more the interscholastic baseball league has melted down to two members—High School and Smith Academy. Nominally Manual Training School is still a member but it is doubtful if Manual will play any more of the scheduled games. Blees is yet only an honorary member.

The Manual team has been temporarily broken up by Principal Jackson of Smith Academy and for insisting that certain members of the Manual team be kept out of the game until certain scholastic "conditions" were made up.

The game between Smith and Manual which was scheduled for Saturday morning has been forfeited to Smith, owing to the inability of Manual to put a team in the field.

When the roll was called after the "weeding out" it was found that Manual's infield was all shot to pieces. Nothing was left but the shortstop and only one pitcher survived. Under the circumstances there was nothing else to do but forfeit the game as there are no acceptable substitutes and a team could not be completed in time for the game.

JUVENILE COURT SEEMS MORE LIKE TRIBINAL OF MERCY THAN OF JUSTICE

Sympathy With Youthful Delinquents Was Dominant Note at Second Session and It Tinctured All of Judge Foster's Judgments.

A session of the juvenile court was held Friday afternoon in the room of the court of criminal correction. This is Division 11 of the circuit court for the trial of youthful delinquents, and is presided over by Judge Foster, who, while thoroughly judicial, is yet more the father than the judge.

The proceeding was not so much a trial as a preliminary hearing to clear of trivial cases a docket congested by delay in making ready the permanent courtroom in the new City Hall.

Division 11 has no regular place of sitting and is "visiting around." The first session was held in Judge Ryan's courtroom, and Friday Judge Moore gave up his bench to Judge Foster for the afternoon.

The dominant note of Friday's proceedings was its entire informality and the absorbing interest taken in the woes of the juvenile malefactors by a large number of well-dressed men and women.

It was not so much a court as a gathering of persons deeply interested in the welfare of children led to do wrong, trying to do right.

Beside the judge on the bench sat his stenographer that he might be close enough to hear the low, frightened voices of the children who were being questioned as to their wrongdoing.

Women Showed Their Sympathy.

Before the court opened the jury box was filled with ladies, some of them beautifully gowned, others in somber garb, but all with sweet, sympathetic faces. They were the lovers of children, and all of them had worked for this very thing. When the child prisoners were brought before the judge they left the jury box, however, and crowded into the witness stand, leaning over the railing to be nearer the children. All were intensely interested in the proceedings, and most of them were familiar with every case that came up, and knew the delinquents personally, having visited them in the detention rooms. All through the proceedings, when some pitiful little tale of wrongdoing was being confessed to the judge in hushed voices by the youngsters, the eyes of the women filled with tears, and in many instances there was good cause for deepest sympathy. Occasionally the judge in pondering a decision as to the future of a child would look in their direction and would catch in some woman's eyes a plea for mercy that usually settled it.

Before the bar stood Probationary Officer Herman Horchert and Assistant Dain, who acted as prosecuting officers, and an advisory board to the judge, who frequently asked them questions as to the merits of the cases, or turned to them for advice. Mr. Horchert had before him a list of the delinquents and their offenses. Deputy Sheriff Jereback, marshal of the court, had its duplicate, and called the prisoners to the bar in a voice different from that which he uses when he demands the presence of prisoners in the Court of Criminal Correction.

Deputy Sheriff Noonan conducted the prisoners from the detention room to the judge, but he did it in such a good-natured way as to somewhat relieve the situation of its terrors to the children.

Seemed Like a Tribunal of Mercy.

It seemed a court of sympathy rather than one of justice; a tribunal of mercy rather than of punishment. The whole atmosphere of the courtroom was changed. Case-hardened officials and court habitues relaxed, their manner of cynicism and their indifference to the fate of malefactors, gave way to a sympathetic interest in the proceedings and an interest in every case.

Such was the picture presented, but underneath it all was a sternness born of the necessity to turn the careers of some 30 or 40 children into better courses. There was a responsibility imposed upon the court that none could ignore, which soon became apparent when the judge talked to the boys and girls brought before him.

It was evident that someone in the police courts had erred on the side of mercy, for at least two of the prisoners were men, not boys, in spite of their protestations that they were only 16 years of age. In the case of one of them, which was about to be brought up, Probationary Officer Dain, who had the charge, looked toward the ladies and suggested that the case be brought up at a future time as its details were more fit for a criminal than a juvenile court.

The stories told to the judge had a distinct Dickensian flavor. Some of them were humorous in a pitiful way, while the keynote of others was peculiarly pathetic. Some of the boys were just rollicking, careless youngsters who, in spite of their "bandess," might turn into first rate men, but these were the very ones that a straw in the road might divert into vagabondage.

Hatred of Restraint Behind It All.

The spirit that seemed to pervade them all, except such as had inherent criminal tendencies, was a love of freedom and a hatred of restraint. All had had more or less schooling and a peculiar fact brought out in the stories was that a large number of them had got as far as the Fourth reader and stuck there. Judge Foster turned this into a homily on going to school to the effect that boys who could get no further than the Fourth reader stood in great dnager of being fourth-rate men.

To some at Friday's examination it appeared that danger lies in an excess of mercy, and too much of womanly sympathy at close range.

City boys, and especially such as are likely to come into the juvenile court, learn early to be shrewd, and to take advantage of everything that will help their cause when they get into trouble. In their own language they soon "get wise" to the advantages of tears and pleading eyes, for often in their lives these have come between them and punishment.

One of the boy delinquents excited the utmost interest and sympathy. When the court marshal called for Nicholas C., a little fellow was led through the throng by Deputy Sheriff Noonan. The pair were evidently friends, for they smiled at one another over some little joke. The boy had a merry face, and one who is a judge of boys would have said that he was full of mischief, too good-hearted for his own weal, and that he possessed a strong spirit of adventure. With him on the stand was his sister, Mamie, 16 years old, who works in a factory. She was dressed in mourning for her mother, who died while her boy was in jail.

Wanted to Be a Miner.

Nicholas stole money from his mother for bad companions who worked on his good nature and generosity. That Nicholas was repentant was proved by the fact that as soon as he realized what he had done he recovered part of the money and gave it back to his mother.

The boy had been led into so many scrapes and the mother had so much trouble that she declared him incorrigible and had him arrested.

Thomas O'Sullivan, a mechanic, who lived next door to the family, offered to take the boy and become his guardian.

"What would you like to do, Nicholas?" asked Judge Foster, looking gravely at the frank-eyed youngster.

"I'd like to go to Idaho and learn to be a miner," the boy replied, and his cheek flushed and his eyes sparkled with the spirit of romance. His uncle Dugan was an Idaho miner and the boy had heard so much of the glories of a miner's life in the far West from Aunt "Sis," and perhaps also from a careful perusal of dime novels, that there could be nothing inspiring for him in the humdrum of school.

The thing for him was a life of adventure, and this spirit came out in simply being bad.

But he had thought all these things over in jail, and was willing now to do what others thought best. So the judge shook hands with him and patted him on the shoulder as he would his own son, and told him to think of his dead mother and be a good boy and turned him over to Mr. O'Sullivan with injunctions to report the boy's progress toward a better life to the probationary officer.

"Send that boy to school," said the judge. "He has in him the making of a good and a smart man." And no one who saw the boy's shining face when he left the bench could doubt the judgement.

Joe Had Been With the Soldiers.

Joe McC., a boy with a big, round head and an indolent, dreamy face, was branded an incorrigible because he had a fancy for freedom and ran away from home.

Joe had been at work on two occasions as bundle boy in big stores.

"Why didn't you stick to work?" asked Judge Foster.

"I didn't like it. I had to work from 7 in the morning until 8:30 o'clock at night for $3 a week," the boy replied.

"Because you didn't like it is no reason for not working. All of us dislike our work at times I presume, but we must stick to it. Neither must we be too choice about our jobs. To eat we must work."

Joe was accompanied by his sister, May, who told the judge that the boy had run away from home to become a tramp.

"Where were you?" the judge asked.

"Travelin'," answered the boy shortly.

"In Pullman cars?" Judge Foster asked.

"Naw," said Joe. "Beatin' my way on trains, blind baggage and in box cars."

"Where did you go?"

"I was out at Fort Crook with the soldiers," Joe answered, and there was that in his voice that told as plain as words that being with the soldiers out in Nebraska was a whole lot more fun than going to school.

"Now," said Judge Foster, "don't you know if you keep up that sort of thing you will develop into a tramp? I will send you home, and you must go to school, but remember that you are still in charge of this court and cannot get away from it until you are 21 years old. We will help you get an education. Mr. Dain will have charge of you, and will report your conduct to the court. Now bood-by, and don't come before me again." The judge shook hands with the boy. This is his custom when he releases his youthful prisoners, but those whom he remands for further trial go away under his displeasure.

Only two girls were before Judge Foster Friday and both their cases were pitiful enough. One of them he sent home with her father. The other was remanded for trial next Tuesday, a representative of a big department store stating that his firm would prosecute her. A gentleman was in court to give bail for her, stating that his wife and himself had become interested in the girl, who is only 14 years old, and proposed to do all they could to save her from future trouble.

The first real session of the court will take place in the regular courtroom, 315 New City Hall, May 19.

PATIENT FLIRTS WITH DEATH

Simon Morak Was Almost Suffocated at City Hospital When Fireman Corry Rescued Him.

Simon Morak, a patient in the City Hospital, was not feeling any the worse Saturday morning from his experience in flirting with death Friday afternoon, when he was saved from suffocation by the prompt action of Charles Corry, the fireman detailed at the institution.

It is the custom each week to fumigate the infectious ward by burning sulphur. This work is done by an attendant, who is expected to watch the work and see that no one enters the ward until the fumes have disappeared, but he left his post and Morak went in.

The sulphur fimes choked him and he ran to a window, where he sought fresh air as the deadly gas poured out about him.

He was near the fire escape and Fireman Corry carried him down. Physicians worked for ten minutes to recuscitate him.

BARBERS WANT CHEAPER WATER

They Say That in No City in the Country Are the Rates so High.

CONVENTION WILL DEAL WITH QUESTION

Manufacturers' Association of St Louis Is Also Making an Effort to Obtain Better Rates for Its Members.

St. Louis union barbers have started a campaign to secure lower water rates for their shops.

The St. Louis Manufacturers' Association is conducting a similar campaign on behalf of the manufacturers of St. Louis.

The two organizations have so far been acting independently.

The barbers contend that in no other city in the United States are the rates for water they use as high as in St. Louis. A shop that pays $46 a year for water in St. Louis, they, say, would pay only $9 a year for the same amount of water in Buffalo, $14 in Washington, $1[illegible] in Cleveland, $10 in Des Moines and $17 in Chicago.

A convention of St. Louis barbers has been called for June 3 in Druid's Hall, when the water rate question will be thoroughly discussed.

The call for the convention has been issued by the joint committee of water rates, composed of representatives of the Boss Barbers' Association, the Missouri State Barbers' Protective Association and the Journeymen Barbers' Union.

The Manufacturers' Association has also named a committee to take the matter up. President Kirgsland, in a recent report, says the manufacturers of St. Louis pay from 250 to 600 per cent more than those of other cities for water used in factories.

The barbers have prepared the following comparative table of water rates for their shops, which they are using in their campaign:

CITY.	First Chair.	Additional Chairs.	Bath Tub.	Additional Tubs.	Meter Rates Per M.

MARRIED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Frank Healey Lacked Confidence That He Could Support a Wife Until Middle-Aged.

Frank W. Healey and Miss Emma Cummings of Peverly, Jefferson County, sweethearts since childhood, were married at Clayton by Justice J. B. Greensfelder.

The bride is 40 years old and the groom a trifle her junior. Many times the wedding date was set, but Healey felt that he needed a better income to care for the woman he loved, and she was patient with a confidence in his judgment that was supreme. When the happy time did arrive, they decided that the gossips, who had coupled their names for years, should have no part in the wedding, and they quietly repaired to Clayton and were wedded at twilight Friday.

LOSS TO WORKMEN

A PROMINENT LABOR LEADER DISCUSSES AN ISSUE.

Gives His Own Experience as an Employe in the Railroad Shops—Couldn't Afford to be Sick.

Mr. A. Q. Holmes, of Oneonta, N. Y., an employe of the railroad shops at that place, is well known in labor circles and his own experience, recently related, deserves the attention of every workingman who has lost time and money on account of sickness. Mr. Holmes said:

"Two years ago I had a severe attack of grip which left me in a bad condition. I was so weak that I frequently had to lay off for two or three days at a time during a period of four or five months. I could not very well afford to do this but there was no help for it—I simply was not able to work. I lost flesh, got nervous, had awful headaches and felt worn out all the time.

"I had read of some remarkable cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in cases like mine and so decided to try them. A few boxes helped me and I think I took ten altogether. They drove all traces of the disease out of my system and made me feel like a different man. I have told many of my acquaintances about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and what they did for me."

After an attack of the grip there are always left behind some troublesome effects. Often these are worse than the disease itself and seem to baffle all efforts of physicians. Health is shattered—the blood becomes poor, the flesh falls away, the sufferer grows nervous and irritable, and even slight exertion causes shortness of breath. These are dangerous symptoms and indicate that the system is in a state that invites pneumonia, bronchitis or even consumption. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, however, will not only quickly restore the health after an attack of the grip and expel the lingering germs but, working upon the blood, will render the system proof against the disease. In hundreds of cases just as remarkable as that of Mr. Holmes it has been shown that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have surely accomplished this result.

FIX VALUE OF ATTORNEY'S TIME

Experts Testify $150 an Hour for Writing Will Not Too High.

When an estate is worth $25,000 or more, an attorney is only asking the legal charge if he demands $150 an hour for drawing up a will, according to the testimony of prominent St. Louis attorneys in a suit in the Probate Court at Clayton Friday.

Max F. Ruler sued the estate of the late Fred J. Morton of Kinloch for such service, and put in a claim of $500. It was shown that the estate was under $25,000, and Ruler was allowed $150 by Judge G. A. Wurdeman.

DEFIED COURT; ORDERED TO JAIL

Clarence H. Venner, President of Alton Waterworks, Guilty of Contempt.

BOSTON BANKER IS DENIED APPEAL OR STAY OF SENTENCE

Venner Has Brought Many Unsuccessful Suits to Prevent Consolidation or Sale and Financing Projects of Large Corporations.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 16.—Judge Humphrey, in the United States Circuit Court, has adjudged Clarence H. Venner of Boston guilty of contempt of court and fined him $1000 and costs and, in addition, ordered him committed to the Sangamon County jail for a term of six months.

The court denied Venner's application for an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and also refused to admit him to bail or to stay the execution.

Venner was allowed to spend the night at the Leland Hotel in custody. Venner is president of the New England water works Co. and the Boston Waterworks Co. of Boston, and the Alton Waterworks Co., of Alton, Ill., and is a member of the banking firm of Venner & Co. of Boston.

Venner had defied an order to produce the books of the Alton company in an action to foreclose a mortgage for $200,000, given by the Alton Waterworks Co. to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co.

Venner once attempted to enjoin the Pullman Palace Car Co. from purchasing the Wagner Car Co. and the latter from selling; he attempted a year ago to prevent the United States Steel Co. from exchanging $200,000,000 of preferred stock for 5 per cent bonds; he attempted in the Massachusetts circuit court two years ago to wind up the affairs of the Amalgamated Copper Co., all of which cases were thrown out of court.

He now has a suit pending in the United States court in Chicago to prevent the consolidation of the Rock Island and Frisco railroads.

There is more limitation in the statutes than in the boodling.

Rents sometimes get so high that tenants not only move, but move to other cities.

William Shakspeare has many friends. There is a general disposition to swat Watt.

The state penitentiary is yawning for the St. Louis boodlers—that is to say, it is tired waiting for them.

The Pennsylvania boodler not only goes scot free, but he muzzles the press and has a good time all the year round.

THE TERMINAL BILLS.

The Terminal Association is not satisfied with the very liberal terms recommended by the joint committee of commercial organizations in the terminal matter.

As pointed out by the Post-Dispatch the committee's recommendations conceded altogether too much. The term of the grant should not be longer than 25 years, the levee should not be occupied, the $150,000 now in dispute in the Eighteenth street matter should first be poured into the city treasury. Above all, the compensation should be ample, and should be definitely stated. In granting franchises of this kind nothing should be left to chance or judgment. Only the clearest terms serve to hold the grantees to their duty.

The temper of the Terminal Association is not agreeable. A prominent traffic man is quoted as follows: "Unless these plans are carried out it will not be long before thousands of tons of freight are diverted to other cities because of lack of terminal facilities in St. Louis."

Citizens need not be frightened by such covert threats. St. Louis is in sore need of terminal facilities, but it is not necessary to surrender every public interest in order to get them.

The duty of the Assembly is plain. In framing these ordinances for final passage consider, as of primary, essential importance the public interest. The special interest of the Terminal Company must be adapted to this. If this cannot be done kill the bills.

Between the schoolma'am and the juvenile court the inadequate parent is pretty well supplemented; he cannot be eliminated.

ABOUT HONOR.

The high sense of honor in the boodle-bund is one of the most affecting facts in current politics. It is affecting even to tears—of laughter.

When a St. Louis councilman accepts $25,000 for his vote honor binds him to cast it in accordance with the terms of the contract. But before voting he may accept $50,000 from the other side and vote accordingly, provided he returns the $25,000 to the first purchaser. This is honor. Common sense requires him to hold fast the $50,000, but this rule is not always followed. Sometimes the admonition of common sense is disregarded and the $50,000 returned. But honor is always inviolable. No member of the boodlebund would think of fracturing his honor—perish the thought.

This rule prevails in the Missouri legislature. When a man accepts $1000 for a vote he must vote "right" or return the money. It is gratifying to be assured that honor is more imperative among boodlers than common sense. Anybody can regulate his conduct by common sense. But only the most refined and discriminating sense of honor will insure perfect rectitude in the handling of boodle. No man is eligible to membership in the boodle-bund whose honor is not of the acutest sort. Fine word that—honor.

The thief who is robbing the church poor boxes may be the burglar who breaks the children's penny banks.

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE.

If the Municipal Assembly can devise a plan whereby the collection and disposal of garbage may be under the direct control of the city, that body will earn the unstinted praise and gratitude of citizens.

The present contract was obtained by the "hold-up" method. The matter had been allowed to drift, the old contract expired and then, "what could we do?"

Let not those plaintive words be repeated. The authorities have had ample notice. And there is time enough to make the necessary arrangements.

The collection of garbage is disgracefully inadequate at present. The contract is observed or ignored, with a happy disregard of legal obligation, and there seems no remedy for the wrong. It is an intolerable condition which must be relieved.

A municipal garbage plant with municipal collecting agencies is a practical scheme which has worked well in other cities. The sooner we adopt some such method the better it will be for the health and credit of the city.

The boodler who is too honest to take money from both sides is not a fully developed rascal, but he might grow.

THE CHORUS GIRL.

Another foreigner has been struck with the engaging style of the American chorus girl.

M. Jules Huret, a Parisian journalist, declares that the two things which have impressed him most in this country, and which he admires the most, are the gigantic plant of the steel trust at Pittsburg and the American chorus girl.

The influence of the American chorus girl on the foreign mind is remarkable. Does a European journalist come over here to study commercial conditions? He goes back home and writes an essay on the American chorus girl. Does a dramatic critic visit us for the purpose of studying our theatrical methods? He sends back a glowing account of the American chorus girl. Does a foreign politician visit us to study the growth of democratic institutions? Straightway he recognizes the beauty [illegible] of the American chorus [illegible]. Does [a] European [journ]alist come to see us and then write a two-pound book on "My Impressions of America"? Four hundred pages are devoted to the American chorus girl. Does a prince of the royal blood visit us incognito to get away from the formalities of court life? Every night we find him surrounded by a bevy of American chorus girls. They are the first to greet him and the last to tell him good-by.

This has been the invariable rule heretofore. M. Huret is the first to include a reference to any such utilitarian subject as the steel plant. No doubt he did this only to make the editor believe that he was attending to business. How could he possibly admire a steel plant and a chorus girl in the same breath?

The disappointment of the Democratic spoilsmen over the Mayor's appointments and their failure to get pledges of subordinate places for party henchmen is not shared in the slightest degree by the people of St. Louis. The Administration's profession of reform would have been a mockery if the Mayor had selected his appointees with a view of filling the offices with partisans. The appointees upon whom pressure is being brought to make clean sweeps of Republican subordinates should bear in mind that they represent a reform administration practically pledged to the merit system, and that having been appointed by the Mayor on that basis they should respect his principles and observe his policy. Not to do this would be a betrayal of his confidence as well as of a public trust.

THE SCHWEICKHARDT CONFESSION.

Former State Senator Schweickhardt's admissions to Circuit Attorney Folk disclose shocking conditions of corruption in the State Legislature. Schweickhardt testifies to systematic boodling. Schweickhardt admits that he himself handled a boodle squad of four Senators, serving as a go-between and distributer of bribes for the bribers and the boodlers. He admits that he took money for his votes and that he raised a fund for the repeal of the Nesbit law.

The Missouri lobby is a reeking scandal. The conditions are intolerable. Nor should it be forgotten that respectable men have given the foul lobby the benefit of their respectability and have given aid to the corruptionists by covering their dishonest deals with the cloak of honesty, argument and good intent.

We must change our methods and standards. The lobby must be dealt with as an unclean thing with which no man can be identified as a paid agent without suffering the penalty of public condemnation. Senators and Representatives must be selected with care and their conduct must be closely scrutinized.

An unpleasant feature of the Schweickhardt case is the fact that Schweickhardt holds a valuable privilege in Forest Park, for which he is paying the city a ridiculously small consideration. Should a man of this kind be intrusted with a public privilege? If it is possible to re-let the Forest Park restaurant privilege prompt action to this end should be taken.

One of those Shakspearean Stratford-on-Avon buildings that are to be demolished should be put together for the World's Fair. In St. Louis next year there will be a larger number of the admirers of Shakspeare than ever before came together on the same spot.

JUST A MINUTE WITH THE POST-DISPATCH POET AND PHILOSOPHER

IN BALTIMORE.

The poets and the humorists
Will meet in Baltimore—
Those jolly wights who shake you up
With laughter to the core.
They'll take a week to celebrate
Deliverance from toil,
And on the troubled waves of life.
To pour the soothing oil.

What brand of oil will be supplied
As yet they have not heard,
But something very good, no doubt,
As well may be inferred,
Because a bard, however poor,
Can have no peace or rest,
Or have the mildest sort of time,
Unless he has the best.

The poets and the humorists
Who light the daily press
Will all be Johnnie-on-the-spot,
Dead swell, and nothing less;
And when to Washington they go,
To view that gorgeous town,
The editors and bosses there
To them will all bow down.

This feast of rhyme and reason will Begin next Monday morn.
Oh, long and loud each poet there
Will toot his precious horn!
If all the papers are so dry
They bore you day by day,
Remember this, the coming week:
The poets are away.

"Show Me."

"Show me!" Odd phrase, isn't it? Expresses doubt, uncertainty, unbelief. When a man demands to be shown, it is a subtle (but none the less emphatic) insinuation that he believes you are open to suspicion. In other words, he thinks you are trying to "con" him, and he demands that you prove the genuineness of your pretensions or assertions before he will accept you at your own estimate.

"Show me!" One St. Louisan actually had the pulse to say, a few days ago, that this expression is only two years old. Where has he been sleeping all this time? "Show me" is as old as Christendom.

Thomas, the doubting disciple, was the originator of this phrase.

When a certain statement of conditions was set before him he refused to accept it without proof. He wanted to see for himself.

"Show me," said Doubting Thomas.

It is not on record that Thomas was the original Missourian, but he may have been. One thing is sure. He could not have had a greater honor than to be the forbear of a people so multitudinous and mighty as the great people known as Missourians.

Being honest themselves, they require honesty on the part of everybody with whom they deal. Hence their continual demand to be "shown." This request may sound discourteous and it may ruffle the feelings of the person addressed, but a little proof can't hurt anybody, can it? The man who has nothing to conceal has nothing to fear.

Might as well continue to show us. We are from Missouri and we're used to it.

Edward W. Townsend's latest novel contains a character known as "Smiling Harry," who stole $250. Harry finally won an heiress, but he would have been a sorry failure as a boodler.

"'Her fool of a father should make up his mind,' he said roughly." We quote from a recent English novel. Upon second thought, how else could he have said it?

When a man says to you, "A man can't do business honestly nowadays," you are certain of one thing—that he can't.

They call a saloon an "exchange" because there is where you swap your hard-earned money for a jag.

A man asked for a street car transfer and the conductor gave him a punch.

WHAT A GIRL SAW.

A Maryville girl who went to St. Louis to attend the World's Fair dedication ceremonies wrote home an amusing and breezy letter regarding them. The Tribune says she is an uncompromising little Democrat, which adds interest to her comments on the "big guns" she saw and heard. Here is an extract:

"We took in everything. I tell you what, we had to pay for 'seeing room,' even along the sidewalk. The best seats cost $1. We couldn't afford that, and we thought it would be cheaper to stand up or run the risk of getting cheaper seats. We were just in time to buy seats for 25 cents each on a 'tally-ho'—we called it—it was on that order. We could see fine. We were a good deal closer to the 'main guns' than some of those who paid a dollar for their seats.

"Gen. Miles is a fine-looking fellow; I was in love with him. He wore a dark blue uniform with 'mammoth' gold braid trimming. John said it was the uniform and trimmings that I found so adorable. Roosevelt isn't as large a man as I had imagined him to be, but my; he is so independent and fearless! When he arose to speak he bowed to the applause, then glanced around and took his chair and stepped from it to the table. Had anyone wanted to do him harm it was a fine chance. But the way he did it was so unconscious! It made the people smile. 'Grover' was applauded about as long as was the President. He is an old fogy! Not a bit of life; just an easy-going way of talking. And before he got through I think some people yawned; I am not sure.

"But some of the dignitaries were handsome. We had our opera glasses with us and as we couldn't hear anything we took it out in looking. The cardinal (Gibbons) is such a small piece of humanity. But he has such a good, full-of-fun face. And the Japs and Chinese—and Mark Hanna—we saw them all. All this was in the Liberal Arts building, and the speakers were in a box by themselves."

A TRAGIC LAMENT.

"Did you say that you were wedded to your art?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "I'm tied to it for life, all right. But I don't hesitate to confess that the honeymoon was [ove]r some years ago."—Washington Star.

To Smoke or Not to Smoke?

Selections From "Tobacco In Song and Story," by John Bain, Jr.; Published by H. M. Caldwell Co., Boston.

The Origin of Tobacco.

The Prophet was taking a stroll in the country when he saw a serpent, stiff with cold, lying on the ground. He compassionately took it up and warmed it in his bosom. When the serpent had recovered it said:

"Divine Prophet, listen. I am now going to bite thee."

"Why, pray?" inquired Mahomet.

"Because thy race, too, make perpetual against mine?" was the Prophet's rejoinder. "How canst thou, besides, be so ungrateful, and so soon forget that I saved thy life?"

"There is no such thing as gratitude upon this earth," replied the serpent, "and if I were now to spare thee, either thou or another of thy race would kill me. By Allah, I shall bite thee!"

"If thou hast sworn by Allah, I will not cause thee to break thy vow," said the Prophet, holding his hand to the serpent's mouth. The serpent bit him, but he sucked the wound with his lips and spat the venom on the ground. And on that very spot there sprung up a plant which combines within itself the venom of the serpent and the compassion of the Prophet. Men call this plant by the name of tobacco.—Conte Arabe.

Sam Slick on Virtues of a Pipe.

"The fact is, squire, the moment a man takes to a pipe, he becomes a philosopher. It's the poor man's friend; it calms the mind, soothes the temper, and makes a man patient under difficulties. It has made more good men, good husbands, kind masters, indulgent fathers, than any other blessed thing on the universal earth."—Sam Slick, the Clockmaker.

A Poet's Pipe.

From the French of Charles Baudelaire.

A Poet's pipe am I,
And my Abyssinian tint
Is an unmistakable hint
That he lays me not often by.
When his soul is with grief o'erworn,
I smoke like the cottage where
They are cooking the evening fare
For the laborer's return.

I enfold and cradle his soul
In the vapors moving and blue
That mount from my fiery mouth;
And there is power in my bowl
To charm his spirit and soothe,
And heal his weariness too.
—Richard Herne Shepherd.

Napoleon's First Pipe.

Constant relates the following anecdote of the great Napoleon, who once took a fancy to smoke, for the purpose of trying a very fine Oriental pipe which had been presented to him by a Turkish or Persian ambassador.

"Fire having been brought, it only remained to communicate it to the tobacco, but that could never be effected by the method which his majesty adopted. He contented himself with alternately opening and shutting his mouth, without attempting to draw in his breath. 'O, the devil!' cried he at last, 'there will be no end of this business.' I observed to him that he did it half-heartedly, and showed him how he ought to begin. But the emperor always returned to the yawning. Wearied by his vain efforts, he at last desired me to light the pipe. I obeyed, and gave it to him. But scarcely had he drawn in a mouthful than the smoke, which he knew not how to expel, turned back into his palate, penetrated into his throat, and came out by his nose and blinded him.

"As soon as he recovered his breath he ejaculated, 'Take that away from me! What abomination! O! the swine!—my stomach turns.' In fact, he felt himself so incommoded for at least an hour, that he renounced forever the pleasure of a habit which he said was only fit to amuse sluggards."

Prof Huxley on Smoking

At a debate upon "Smoking" among the members of the British Association, many speakers denounced and others advocated the practice. Prof. Huxley said, "For forty years of my life, tobacco has been a deadly poison to me. (Loud cheers from the anti-tobacconists.) In my youth, as a medical student, I tried to smoke. In vain! at every fresh attempt my insidious foe stretched me prostrate on the floor. (Repeated cheers.) I entered the navy; again I tried to smoke, and again met with a defeat. I hated tobacco. I could almost have lent my support to any institution that had for its object the putting of tobacco smokers to death. (Vociferous applause.) A few years ago I was in Brittany with some friends. We went to an inn. They began to smoke. They looked very happy, and outside it was very wet and dismal. I thought I would try a cigar. (Murmurs.) I did so. (Great expectations.) I smoked that cigar—it was delicious! (Groans.) From that moment I was a changed man; and I now feel that smoking in moderation is a comfortable and laudable practice, and is productive of good. (Dismay and confusion of the anti-tobacconists. Roars of laughter from the smokers.) There is no more harm in a pipe than there is in a cup of tea. You may poison yourself by drinking too much green tea, and kill yourself by eating too many beefsteaks. For my part, I consider that tobacco, in moderation, is a sweetener and equalizer of the temper." (Total rout of the anti-tobacconists and complete triumph of the smokers.)

Inscription for a Tobacco Jar.

Keep me at hand; and as my fumes arise,
You'll find a jar the gates of Paradise.
—Cope's Tobacco Plant.

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS

EDUCATED ELEPHANT.

THE ELEPHANT IS FORMED BY TWO BOYS.

Two boys are required to personate our old friend the elephant—one represents his fore and the other his hind legs. The first boy stoops, steadying himself by placing his hands on his knees, the second boy stooping, also to the same level, with his hands on the first boy's thighs. A quilt, doubled three or four times, is now placed on the back of the elephant. A large blanket or shawl is then thrown over them, one end of which is twisted to represent the trunk of the animal, the other end serving in a similar manner to represent his tail. Two paper cones form the tusks, and the elephant is complete. A bright and witty boy should be selected to play the part of keeper, and he must lecture on the prodigious strength, wonderful sagacity, and extreme docility of the animal, proving the latter quality by lying down and letting the elephant walk over him.

THE GAME OF BUZZ.

A number of children stand up in a row and the first one begins to count one, then the next one says two, and so on. When the person gets to seven, instead of saying seven he is to buzz, and so on, every seventh number or number having in it a seven, instead of saying the number he must buzz.

Just as soon as any one misses he must get out of the game, and the one that stands up the longest w[ins].

ONE LIFTS THREE.

To lift three matches with one you should, with a slit in one end, fasten two together, and place the third against them, forming a pyramid. To lift this, tilt the wedged matches up until the third falls within the joint. You may then raise your match, which lifts the three.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Omaha Injunction

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The decision of Judge Dickinson at Omaha yesterday clearly defines that we have two great powers at least if not parties in this country, the money and the labor power, forcing to our attention the great middle class—without whom neither of the first mentioned two could exist. Nothing to arbitrate has had its day—but arbitration has come to stay, and it devolves upon the middle class to enforce it—not only to protect their interests, but their rights and lives. The men who pay carfare and walk and lose money in their business during a strike should enforce their rights, and the sooner they take the matter in hand the better.

I recollect years ago that to talk about arbitration called forth expression either in the interest of capital or labor, ignoring the middle class. Although the speaker walked during the street car strike, and lost money as a merchant during the railroad strike and represented the middle class since then, and as the result of experience you hear much less of it from the same standpoint and as the two principal parties to the strikes have defined their interests the third or middle should, and I hope you will educate them to the changes as they have taken place, that they may be able to manage them as they have or may arise in the future.

St. Louis. MERCHANT.

The Southern View.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Allow me through your valuable paper to tell "A Southerner" that a gentleman—a gentleman, understand, always considers one of the opposite sex a lady if nothing more than by right of her sex and treats her as such, no matter how finely or poorly dressed or how well or ill behaved she may be. Gentlemen, like ladies, are born, not made. A NORTHERNER.

St. Louis.

Politeness Is Always Worth While.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Kindly allow me to write a few lines under the head of "Letters From the People." I became very much interested in the paragraph on "Politeness in Street Cars," signed by "Old Virginian" a few days ago, and answered last night by "A Southerner." It is certainly sad when ladies do not appreciate a courtesy shown to them on a street car or anywhere else. But if our friend, who signs himself "A Southerner," will only stop a moment and think that if there were only a few ladies remaining who would appreciate it, it would be worth while for their sake and for his own sake for him to continue in being a perfect gentleman. Politeness will always be appreciated by some, though they were but few, and who knows where the influence of a kind act may end. I can speak from experience, for I know whenever I meet with a kind act it makes me feel as though there was still some good and helpful influence in the world, and as though I want to help extend it.

So, my friend, for the sake of those who do appreciate a kindness shown, and who feel like returning it to some other discouraged heart, I would like to say do not give up, for the good you do will have its influence somewhere.

St. Louis. A LADY SUBSCRIBER.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

How to Clean Felt Hats.

How many women have taken out last year's felt hat to retrim for every day, only to put it back as being "too dirty or too rain-spotted to use."

I have an excellent remedy and a most simple one, within the reach of every pocketbook—dry cornmeal, rubbed vigorously over the felt with a clean cloth. A rough Turkish towel is fine. All dust and streaks, even rain spots, will magically disappear.

Follow the dry meal bath with a good brushing with a clean, new whiskbroom. If the shape is not just what you want the brims, at least, can be changed by pressing under a damp cloth with a moderately hot iron. White felts clean better with block chalk, purchased at any drug store for 10 cents; but a good shaking is better than brushing. Then wipe carefully with a towel one way.

Beaver hats also clean beautifully this way, but be sure and only rub one way—with the hair of the beaver.

Cream Puffs.

Put half a pint of water and two ounces of butter into a saucepan over the fire. When boiling add quickly four ounces of pastry flour; beat until smooth. Take from the fire, and when cool add one egg; beat until mixed; add another and another until you have added four at least; beat thoroughly again. Drop the mixture by spoonfuls in a greased pan; bake in a moderate oven for over forty minutes. When done split them on one side; fill with cold soft custard made by adding a tablespoonful of cornstarch, moistened with cold milk, to half a pint of hot milk; cook for a moment; add the yolks of three eggs beaten with three tablespoonfuls of sugar; take from the fire; add a teaspoonful of vanilla and set aside to cool.

Spanish Proverbs on Women.

Choose neither a wife nor linen by candle light.

Women and weather are not to be trusted.

No season is as brief as a woman's love.

A woman may be loyal to love, but never to lovers.

Woman is a curious creature with long hair and short ideas.

A girl's hair draws more than a ship's cable.

Woman is a guitar, the sweetness of whose tone depends upon the player.

He who has a handsome wife or a castle on the frontier is never without fear.

Women Bell-Ringers.

St. Andrew's Church of Bradfield, Berkshire, is the only place in England where the bells are rung by women. The reason why women have been engaged for this task is very simple. About eighteen months ago there was a great dearth of men and boys in the district, owing to the scarcity of labor, and the vicar, being unable to obtain the requisite number of men to ring the bells, asked the ladies of the congregation to undertake the duty. The appeal was instantly and heartily responded to, and six young women have rung the bells of this pretty little church regularly and punctually for nearly eighteen months. It is heavy and trying, but the bell-ringers have become quite enthusiastic in the work and do it excellently.

FUN AND INTERESTING READING MATTER FOR THE HOME CIRCLE

THE OLD JOKES' HOME

By O. B. Joyful.

Wishing to aid in the great and glorious work of the S. P. C. H., the importance and magnitude of which he fully appreciates, Station Master Jerry Coakley has volunteered to establish a quarantine at the Midway to prevent evil-minded persons from coming into the city with ancient gags whose lean and scanty forms cry out to heaven against the cruel taskmaster.

To facilitate this work seven attendants will be enrolled on the station force. Elegant liveries will be provided of a dignified chestnut hue, and bronzed buttons shaped like unto the chestnut with the letters "O. J. H." will set off the uniform.

The baggage and persons of actors and vaudevillians will be closely searched by the attendants.

A detention ward with a doctor to administer "first aid to the injured" in the shape of a saving dose of Cork-O will also be opened, that no time may be lost in the treatment of the woeful and emaciated joke.

Mr. Coakley regrets that he did not think of the quarantine a day sooner, since many of the Weber and Fields jokes were so evidently in need of a rest that they almost expired during Tuesday night's performance.

This inhumanity is appalling! Not content with maltreating their slaves during 600 consecutive performances in New York City, where the milk of human kindness has long since soured, these primeval joke-masters must perforce drag their unfortunate slaves a thousand miles to the West to earn three plunks a head from their exhibition.

Nero in his most savage moods was not a patch to the audience which howled and giggled in its glee at the sight of the unfortunate jokes cavorting under the lash.

Had he been there, the official representative of the O. J. H. would have rescued at least one unfortunate from its horrible slavery. Alas, pay day at the O. J. H. is still three days away, and the gallant officer lacked the necessary triple plunklet which would have put him past the door. Thus doth money—vile, filthy lucre—ever prevent good deeds.

The following note arrived in the first mail this morning:

Prof. Hesa Corker.

Dear Sir—I have vainly tried to obtain your famous breakfast food Cork-O (made from pure desiccated cork) at some of the principal stores in our little city during the past three days. I was told this afternoon the reason was that the monitor Arkansas had taken all the supply by orders of the war department to be used in floating the boat over sandbars; also to feed the sailors with, so that in tight places they might jump overboard and walk alongside the monitor without any exertion of their own. They say your famous food is an infallible life preserver.

Have you a book of recipes showing the best ways to prepare Cork-O? May I butt in long enough to inquire if goat's milk is a proper accompaniment? It seems to me that would be just about the cheese.

I am told that Cork-O will eventually do away with the necessity of cork soles and render walking easy. Is this a fact? M. R., JR.

DANGER IN OCCULT INVESTIGATION.

Medical men and investigators of the occult will find much to interest them in "The Great Psychological Crime," by Florence Huntley.

Mrs. Huntley is known as the original Mrs. Spoopendyke, of the famous Spoopendyke papers, which amused newspaper readers for years. These papers were written by her husband, Stanley Huntley.

But it appears that while he was making humor in this way, Mrs. Huntley was delving into the deep and mystic things of nature. Her book is anything but funny, being a warning against what she believes to be the dangers of hypnotism and spiritualism. In so far as one lends himself to become the subject of a hypnotist or permits himself to be used as a medium, Mrs. Huntley teaches that "he has become but an automaton, a plaything, a bankrupt, a lost soul. He has entered upon the way of death." To yield oneself up to another's will, whether in or out of the body, is "the great psychological crime." And Mrs. Huntley tells of the terrible effects this yielding has had in certain cases. She repeats the stories about the asylums for the insane being full of victims of religious or mediumistic mania. She appears to base her warning on Bulwer Lytton's mystical romance, in which the would-be adept is confronted with "the dweller at the threshold"—a terrifying chimera that confronts any one who wishes to look into the things beyond the region of the senses. She is pessimistic in the extreme, believing that none but evil influences surround the average human being. But she suggests that one can investigate the occult in an independent manner, without danger to the investigator.

MUSICAL EDUCATION.

As a practical guide for parents and teachers "Musical Education," by Albert Lavignac, will, no doubt, be found full of good suggestions and helpful hints. The author's long experience as a teacher qualifies him to speak. The advice is not theoretical, but practical and susceptible of immediate application. The book is divided into six parts: General remarks upon musical education, the study of instruments, the study of singing, the various studies necessary for composers, of the means of rectifying an ill-directed musical education, various kinds of instruction. ("Musical Education," by Albert Lavignac, professor of harmony at the Paris Conservatoire, translated from the French by Esther Singleton. D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

SIMEON FORD IN BOSTON.

Simeon Ford, who is regarded as the legitimate successor of Mark Twain as an after-dinner funmaker, has just finished his first book, "A Few Remarks," and Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish it shortly. In Boston the other day Mr. Ford told his audience that he had been there before. "When I was here two years ago," he continued, "I got on a trolley car filled with women. I was the only male passenger. That would not have worried a Bostonian, but it worried me. I always feel timid going about Boston without a chaperon. As I squeezed into a seat my eye was attracted to a sign which read, 'Half the people on this car are wearing Bunker Hill Pants.' I believe that statement to be false, but it was the voice of prophecy."

A BOOK FOR THINKERS.

In "Psychology and Common Life," Prof. Hoffman surveys the present state of psychical research, with special reference to the needs and interests of everyday life. The object of the book, he says, is "to select the most important facts from the great mass of material now accumulated by students, describe them in language easily apprehended by the general reader, and pointed out their bearing upon the interests of everyday life."

His success is gratifying. It is both a useful and an interesting book. No reader who opens the volume will put it down until he has the whole contents.

A preliminary chapter is entitled "The Brain and Intelligence," full of practical sense and suggestion. The chapter on "Attention" will help many bewildered thinkers who have not established the condition of conservative thought. The chapter on "Hallucinations" is fresh and unconventional. "Sleep," "Hypnotism," "The Mind and Disease," "Christian Science," "Telepathy"—these are some of the special phases of psychological inquiry, treated practically and helpfully. ("Psychology and Common Life." By Frank Sargent Hoffman, Ph. D., Professor of Psychology, Union College. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. For sale by Jeff Book and News Co.)

THE REAL BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Charles Burr Todd thinks he has found the real Benedict Arnold, or rather the real motive force which impelled that officer to betray his country. The woman did it. "It was the fascinations, the persuasions long continued, the intrigues with the British of a wife madly loved, and which, if discovered, he knew would tear her from his arms, that led him to commit his monumental crime."

Mr. Todd has written a very creditable biography. He dwells, rightfully with special emphasis, upon the great services rendered by Arnold to the patriot cause before his treason, services too often slurred or ignored. Arnold was by no means a base or ignoble character. He was a fallen man, but still a man, and his ruin need not blind us to his great qualities. The effort to explain his conduct by referring it to his wife is not successful, however. The reality of a man is never revealed by any one circumstance. In this case Mrs. Arnold played a part, but Adam's plea will hardly be accepted.

The book is well worth reading for its freshness and force. The partisanship is apparent, but not offensive. It is a distinct contribution to the literature of a very interesting character. ("The Real Benedict Arnold. By Charles Burr Todd. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.)

On a Pirate Ship.

"The Love of Monsieur," a new romantic story by George Gibbs, author of "In Search of M[illegible]," will be issued by the Harper[illegible] 15. The story is not in any [illegible]rical one, though the time is that of Louis XIV and Charles II. It is the romance of the Chevalier Mornay, a young captain in the French marine, and Mrs. Barbara Clerke, an English heiress. Mr. Gibbs has hit upon the novel idea of bringing the lovers together on a pirate ship, where the heroine, having hitherto scorned her lover, finds herself with dismay dependent upon his protection.

Perverted Proverbs.

"Uneasy lies the tooth that wears a crown," "Still daughters run cheap," "Half a loafer is never well-bred," are some of the perverted proverbs in Col. D. Streamer's amusing book of that name, which Harper & Bros. will publish on May 19, with R. H. Russell's imprint. The proverbs are done into comic verse. Col. Streamer will be remembered as the author of "The Baby's Baedeker."

The German Emperor for Peace.

If any one doubts the peaceful intentions of the German Emperor, let him read "The Kaiser's Speeches," of which a well-edited translation has just been published by the Harpers. "As regards our foreign policy," said the Emperor in 1883, "I am resolved to keep peace with every one, so far as in me lies." In the same year he said, "Our army is to secure our peace." And again in 1895, "In times of peace only the commerce of the world can develop and expand, and peace we will and must maintain."

How to get an ex-convict a job is a question agitating Mr. Hutchins Hapgood, editor of "The Autobiography of a Thief," announced by Fox, Duffield & Co. for early publication. Mr. Hapgood believes thoroughly in the reform, if not in the religious conversion of his ex-thief. Portions of the autobiography published in Leslie's Monthly brought forward an offer of employment in Australia from a Boston philanthropist, but nothing nearer home. The story as recorded by the editor is very convincing in a plain, unvarnished way. It may give those who pride themselves on their judgment of human nature a chance to prove their mettle in the face of prejudice.

SPEED AND STAMINA IN PRESS STAKE

Fastest Field of Sprinters in the Country Will Face Starter in Today's Fair Grounds Feature.

SYLVIA TALBOT A CONSERVATIVE CHOICE

Hilee, Frank Bell, Nickey D. and Other Great Short Distance Performers Among the Contenders.

BY R. D. WALSH.

FAIR GROUNDS, May 16.—As a general rule, race-goers prefer long-distance races to sprints, but there are occasions when the latter are equally as interesting. This is especially so when the contestants are all of the champion variety, as they are in the press stake at the Fair Grounds today.

Never, since the racing game was inaugurated in St. Louis has such a good field of short-distance thoroughbreds come together in any single event.

There have been times when two or three good sprinters have met in a purse race, but this is a stake that will be fought for by the best of their kind in the United States.

Eight are carded to go to the post and there will hardly be a favorite. Several of the candidates will be about the same price, and, of course, the volume of public money will decide which one is best fancied. Mr. Schreiber will be represented by two horses, Erema and Sylvia Talbot, but the latter will be his main dependence.

Erema Not Expected to Win.

Erema is a fast nag when she is running in her own class, but she is out of her element today, and whatever glory she may achieve will be nearly the reflex of her brilliant stable companion, the distinguished daughter of Balgowan-Parole.

Fast as the horses are that are engaged in the Press Stake there is no probability that the track record for the distance will be broken, because the course is now now in its best condition. The top-dressing of loam, which it has received, while it has made it good and safe, has taken away its speed.

Maud Gonne will have the honor of carrying top weight and Sylvia Talbot the lowest.

When age is considered, however, the weights are evenly adjusted, and no candidate has any advantage over another in that respect.

Of All Entered Sylvia's Chances Are Best.

I like the chances of Sylvia Talbot best in the stake. Since her arival in St. Louis several weeks ago she has shown speed and stamina of the highest order. She is nicely weighted with 98 pounds and will be ridden by L. Wilson, who is generally recognized as the best lightweight rider in the West.

She can run this race at the same rate of speed from start to finish and if she manages to break in front at the start I do not think they can catch her before she reaches the wire at the judges' stand. In estimating her chances Jockey Wilson must be considered an important factor.

Next to Sylvia Talbot I fancy Frank Bell. This is his best distance. He has frequently won from high-class horses at six furlongs, but he has invariably been farther in front at the five and one-half furlong pole than at the six. This would clearly indicate that he is better at the shorter distance.

Nickey D. Beat Frank Bell.

Nickey D. is admittedly one of the fastest horses ever seen in St. Louis up to six furlongs. He finished in front of Frank Bell and Deutschland at six furlongs last week but Frank Bell had him beaten at the five and one-half furlong pole. I think Nickey D. will find the company too fast for him at this distance today.

Hilee was never as good as he is now and because of his phenomenal speed will have a large following. He holds the track record for seven furlongs, and if he runs at that gait today Mr. Elliott will take down the prize. But like his stable companion, Miss Mae Day, he is a bad actor.

He is liable to be turned the wrong way when the barrier goes up, and this is a fatal objection to him in such company.

Bridge will carry the hopes and the dollars of East St. Louis and that burg will undoubtedly be well represented. Bridge has shown that he is very speedy.

Louis Wagner Is Unreliable.

Louis Wagner is not a reliable horse, and although he may win it will simply be an illustration of the unexpected happening. I think he is probably better at six furlongs than at five and a half. Next the last, I come to consider the chances of Mr. Turney's mare, Maud Gonne.

This is a high-class thoroughbred, and [illegible] she is in the hands of an excellent [illegible]ainer is sure to be in good condition. If [illegible] wins she will come from behind in the [illegible]etch. She has been carefully prepared [illegible] this race, and is sure to give a good [illegible]ount of herself. I like her for third [illegible].

[illegible]he sixth race will vie in interest with [illegible] stake event. It is at seven furlongs [illegible] has a fine field of horses engaged in [illegible] Deutschland will be the favorite on [illegible]ount of his well-known speed, and also [illegible] reason of the fact that he is in with [illegible] weight—only 96 pounds.

[illegible]ted to [illegible] a Furlong.

[illegible]tom Elastic is also entered [illegible]his is the first time in his his[illegible]r as I know, that he has been [illegible]o this distance, and is therefore [illegible]ture of an experiment. They [illegible] go a mile as well as he can [illegible] but I have no faith in work-[illegible]

[illegible]d and Elastic will set the pace [illegible]ngs and then old Brulare will [illegible]hen they get tired and beat them [illegible] the wire. The Darden mare is in [illegible], having run miles in 1:40 and [illegible]longs in 1:27 recently at Nashville [illegible] is good enough [illegible] win. contest. Cursus is the logical winner of this race.

Cursus Should Go the Distance.

With the same weight up he won at a mile and three-sixteenths the other day, and was going away at the finish. He should have no trouble in going the extra sixteenth.

Kunya and Kisme—both winners recently—should be the runners-up to Cursus, and of these two I prefer the latter at the distance.

The second race will be another interesting contest between several good 2-year-olds. Mr. Duffy thinks he has the best filly at the track in St. Agnes II, but the general opinion is that Orient is a better horse. I think she will prove the superior of the Duffy juvenile this afternoon.

Old Stone should not be worse than third, although he may have some trouble beating Bill Knight, who is a fair animal.

The opening event should go to Lady Vashti, with only a feather up, and Cressida and Immortelle should be the contenders at the finish.

Beana has shown some improvement in her recent races, and on that account I like her in the last race.

Blanco will be favorite, and will be hard to beat, but the old mare will probably head him in the stretch. Lunar, with only three legs, should run third.

Taken as a whole, the card today is by far the best that has been presented in St. Louis in many a day, and the prospects are that with fine weather a large crowd will be out.

STARS MEET IN BOWLING MATCH FOR POST-DISPATCH HIGH GAME TROPHY

Will Roll a Single Game On Acme Cocked-Hat Alleys.

All cocked hat ways lead to the Acme alleys Saturday night.

The reason is that there will be bowled a single game of cocked hat, the like of which has never happened before.

It may not result in a marvelous total for the winner, for all bowlers at the three-pin game know that it is hard to step in, bowl one game, and be at one's best.

Furthermore the roller's fortune may be bad in his one one essay, and his score correspondingly suffer.

It is in the field of contestants which is presented that the match is remarkable—the most remarkable, in fact.

Five men are entered.

One is the leader of the Central League in high average, also the leader of the city, which is practically the world at this game.

Another was, for a long time, high average man of the Central League, and for a long time led it. He finished on the heels of the leader, Giesseo.

A third was in the vanguard of the Junior association for a long time.

The others were well up in their respective organizations.

All five of the contestants have rolled the "possible" in a match game during the season passed. They are the only men who rolled the 90 in matches during the entire season.

They will roll for the high game trophy offered by the Post-Dispatch. By scoring 90 the five contenders established a tie which will have to be rolled off—that is the game which takes place tonight.

CONTESTANTS IN HIGH-GAME ROLL-OFF.

Paul Dueker.
Eugene Held.
Adolph Giessow.
W. H. Clark.
D. C. Wood.

It is not to be expected that the result of this contest will furnish a score of 90.

Out of several hundred league bowlers who participated in the league season of 140 games, the "possible" was scored only five times.

The chances of it being made in a single game, in which there are only five competitors, is therefore small.

Still, the breaks may come, and, on the fast Acme alley, the pins fall at a breath. It is certain the game will be hotly contested.

Giessow, Held and Dueker are veterans at the special match game style of contest. They have bowled in many specials during the past year and are therefore less liable to stage fright than Wood and Clark. The steadiest of veterans fall down under fire, however, and the victory may fall to the lot of one of the less experienced rollers.

Preparations have been made to accommodate a large crowd of rooters at the alleys. The quarters are small, but will contain most of the friends of the bowlers.

The match has been set for 8 o'clock in order to give the men opportunity ot keep engagements later.

It is expected that the battle will be over in less than half an hour. In order not to tire the men by constant work, it may be decided to let them bowl in turn and not simultaneously.

A. Cesar Bengel Will Orate.

In the match nothing but the total will count towards the victory. It may happen therefore that one man may win the event, while the more scientific roller will finish behind him.

Five Men Who Scored the "90," Meet in Roll-Off Tonight.

Misses and cocked pins, however, cannot be figured in a contest of this sort, though some scheme should be devised which would give more credit in the totals for good work in the picking line.

At the conclusion of the match Augustus Bengel, the dean of local cocked-hat and the projector of the National Cocked-hat Association, will "make a few remarks" of congratulation to the winner and to the Acme team, which will be present to witness the battle and receive the orders for the high team average emblems won by them in another Post-Dispatch contest, concluded with the last game of the season.

That match was almost as memorable as the one to be concluded tonight. The Crescent five had been leading all season and at the last match were something over 40 pins to the good. The Acmes, however, came strong at the finish and beat out the odds-on favorites by a good margin.

The match was so close that in the last game of the Crescents they needed 321 pins to tie the fast flying Acmes, who were working out their fate on another alley. The Crescents, in the first half of this last chance, were almost to the requirement, having scored 160 pins.

The team fell down at the close, however, and could not tally enough to win.

Thus the race between the teams was so close that, when 140 games were played, it was not until the last half of the last game in the final match that the winner was decided.

Then victory went to a team which was second choice.

On behalf of the National Cocked-Hat Association, Mr. Bengel will present each bowler in the Post-Dispatch contest for high game with a certificate, handsomely embossed, crediting each with having bowled the highest score possible in a single cocked-hat game.

BURKETT GIVES BATTING LESSON

Knocks First a "Homer," Then Safe Bunt on Waddell's Lightning Shoots.

According to Connie Mack's forecast, Bender, the Indian pitcher, will officiate for the Athletics this afternoon at Sportsman's Park. Willie Sudhoff or Frank Donahue will pitch for St. Louis. It may be Donahue Saturday, as Waddell is booked to pitch the Sunday game. Sudhoff has always been successful against the eccentric pitcher, and he may be saved until Sunday. Bender is a Carlisle School Indian. He looks the part, and is said to possess wonderful speed. He has been very successful so far this season.

Gus Hill would have died of envy could he have seen the magnificent exhibition of club swinging at Sportsman's Park Friday afternoon. Under direction of Expert Waddell, the Browns took two hours arm and shoulder exercise. It was great. The score was 4 to 2.

"They all get crazy when they strike St. Louis," said Manager McAleer between frowns. "They can't win anywhere else, but the worst dubs of them all brace up and pitch the game of their life here. It must be in the air. I wish some of our pitchers would catch the infection. There's the big Rube. He was knocked out of the box in two innings at Chicago Thursday, but he comes back against us Friday and equals his strike-out record. There's one redeeming feature to the Rube. After he wins a good game you generally wallop him the next. He isn't steady."

In his efforts to put the Reuben on the hog train, Jesse Burkett played a lone hand. He had about as much support as a toothpick would give a sign board. In fact he was a star without a setting. Whenever Burkett or Anderso[illegible] do anything, Waddell only tighte[illegible] next man or two [illegible] the emergency demanded, wo[illegible] to bite three chunks out of the atmosphere surrounding the batter's box.

"Rube" was invincible. He worked like a Trojan. Not an inning passed that he did not put somebody through the fanning mill. As a capsheaf to this performance he struck out Sugden, Sudhoff and Hemphill in the last inning. Billy Friel fanned three times out of three times up. Heidrick was caught twice. Every man on the team with the exception of Burkett and Anderson struck out at least once.

Eddie Siever pitched a good game. The Athletics earned their four runs by bunching hits. Batting against any but an extraordinary pitcher like Waddell, the Browns would likely have won the game. They expect to win it from Bender this afternoon with Willie Sudhoff in the box.

After the first four innings it was apparent that the Browns were doomed to defeat unless Waddell could be induced to vacate the box. There were some errors behind his pitching, and one of them let in the second run.

When the work of Burkett and Anderson are considered, you have the full story of the struggle against the odds. Siever held the score down but he might just as well have been without batting support from six of his assistants. Burkett scored both runs, and with Anderson secured four of the six hits.

Burkett's Great Batting Bee.

The versatility of the Browns' left fielder both at bat and on the bases was never better illustrated. He cracked the second ball the "Reuben" pitched. It sounded hard, but didn't look very good at first. The ball struck the infield with such force that Second Baseman Murphy was content to merely wiggle his fingers. Pickering was playing far over to left. He is a fast runner and was off at the crack of the ball. So hard was the hit, however, that Pickering could not intercept it, and he turned in behind it and gave chase.

Up to the clubhouse door the ball sped, while Burkett was digging around the circuit. Just as Pickering was close in the sphere rebounded from the picket fence and banged against the center field bleachers—ample proof of the force behind the hit. Monte Cross' relay was late for Burkett slid over the plate while the ball was sailing in to Scheck.

In the eighth, Burkett showed just where he excels many other batsmen who can sting a ball harder than he. Waddell was pitching some terrific twisters. He fairly burned the air with his speed. Burkett stood waiting as if he were ready for another extra base hit. The Reuben contorted himself and slammed the ball over with as much force as he could command.

With the wonderful judgment and precision that made him the batting leader of the National League two years ago, Burkett intercepted the ball and laid it in a safe place. He quickly brought the stick in front of him and judged the ball correctly. As it came over he thrust the bat forward and then gave quickly. The ball rolled dead toward third base. Schreck threw off his mask and made a grab for the sphere, which was about seven feet from the plate. He missed, and Burkett crossed first base. Even if Schreck had picked up the ball he never could have caught his man. He didn't throw at all.

According to Wallace, Heidrick and the bunch, Burkett's luck has been changed recently, but they are at a loss to know how, for they want and need a change themselves.

Heidrick could not advance Burkett in the eighth and Wallace struck out. It was up to Jesse himself. While Waddell was bringing up his arm, Burkett dashed for second. His runs drew a fierce throw from Schreck. Anderson's hit brought him home.

Andy tried hard to score. He stole second and drew a wild throw from Schreck, which allowed him to go to third. McCormick could not score him. Anderson was left on third in the sixth inning also. He hit safely, went to second on Pickering's fumble and stole third. Waddell feared McCormick and let him walk. Then he fanned Friel.

DESPERATE FIGHT FOR LAST PLACE

Quakers and Cardinals in the First Battle for Cellar Championship.

ED MURPHY NAMED FOR THE SACRIFICE

St. Louis Nationals Have Won But Two Games of the Last 17 Played—Philadelphia Almost as Bad.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—A desperate fight for the cellar championship of the National League will begin this afternoon, for the St. Louis Cardinals arrived this morning for a series of games with the downtrodden Quakers.

Nobody in Philadelphia can see how it is possible for any team to lose more consistently than the Quakers, but the Cardinals seem to have learned fast, for they have been shooting the chutes for two weeks or more. They have won two games out of the last 17. The Quakers have done almost as well. Each team has won seven games. The Quakers have lost 17 and the Cardinals 19.

Manager Donovan will likely work Ed Murphy this afternoon. He has tried every other pitcher, and none have proved effective except Brown, and he barely escaped with his game. If Murphy does not work it will be up to Brown. Duggleby or Burchell will be in the box for the Quakers. The former Cardinal, Roy Brashear, will play second for the Quakers.

Friday's rout at Boston was not Hackett's fault, though he was hit hard. The Bostonians were off in a bunch and scored four runs before the first breathing.

Errors made the game a farce.

But nine hits were gleaned off the delivery of "Sunny Jim," and 10 runs were scored. Dave Brain, as usual, was the chief offender. The St. Louis players seemed to be without heart. Hackett was about the only one who was cool. Boston bunched hits on him and then the bad breaks came at critical times.

The Cardinals might just as well have made a dozen errors for they couldn't find Malarkey. He let them down with six hits. Williams got two of these, but couldn't score. Once with the bases full and one out the batter tapped to the Boston pitcher and a double play resulted.

DONOVAN SEEKS NEW FIELDER

Work of Barclay Has Been Poor—Nickell of Texas League, a Possibility.

Unless George Barclay shows a decided improvement soon, it is probable that Donovan will sign another young outfielder to take his place for a while.

When Pat Donovan left Texas early in April he expressed a desire to see Outfielder Nickell of the Dallas club, and it is possible that Nickell will be brought to St. Louis for a trial with the Cardinals.

Ed Tracy, one of the stockholders in the Dallas club, is in St. Louis and he brings word that Nickell is playing a stronger game than ever and is anxious for Donovan to give this Lajoie of the Texas League a trial. Nickell is a big fellow—as big as Homer Smoot—and is a good, hard hitter. He is quite a slugger, but hits steadily, often for extra bases. The Texas League is fast this year and Nickell is one of its stars. He wouldn't have to be much of a player to be an improvement upon Barclay at the present time.

Tracy is on a hunt for a good young infielder who can hit. The Dallas club has filled every position satisfactorily except second base, and Tracy has been commissioned to sign a player if he can find one in St. Louis that suits him. The Texas League pace is fast this season, ranking above the Missouri Valley League. Two former Valley League players are with the Dallas club.

Tracy says Nickell can be secured from the Dallas club for a small sum, and he will remain in St. Louis to have a conference with Donovan when the Cardinals return, June 1.

Mr. Tracy will leave for Indianapolis in a few days to fix up a deal regarding Catcher Claude Berry of the Dallas club. Berry has a great reputation throughout the South, and last winter he signed a contract with the Indianapolis club of the American Association. There was some dispute over the reserve rule and the Dallas club filed a claim to Berry.

When the national board met, Berry was awarded to the Dallas club. He is ripe for fast company, and Manager Watkins probably will get him for the Indianapolis club next year. He has offered to give the Dallas club a pitcher or a fielder in a week or two if Berry is turned over to the Indianapolis club next season and Tracy will go to Indianapolis to see what players Watkins has to offer. He will return soon and remain until the Cardinals come back to town.

Smith, international secretary, conducted a religious service. In this meeting it is estimated that 200 men enrolled themselves as Christians.

The 197 railroad associations of North America sent 1500 delegates. New England sent 138 men; Mexico, 4; Canada, 54. Denmark sent one man. The German government was represented by two specialists, and France instructed its representative to study and report the methods of the Young Men's Christian Association among railroad men. The mileage traveled by the delegates exceeded 2,000,000. Free transportation was furnished by the railroad companies to all delegates, the value of which would be $60,000, and the concessions made by the Pullman company would exceed $5000. The Pennsylvania railroad provided one of its best cars for a delegation of its men. The companies provided every facility to advance the convention, but in no case did they have a voice or a vote in the meeting. The companies have given over $1,000,000 for association buildings, and contribute over $200,000 a year towards the current expenses, or about one-half of the amount spent. The employes have the full direction of the associations.

Col. John J. McCook was president of the conference. President Stevens of the C. & O. Railroad, General Manager Mudge of the Santa Fe and other officials took part in the discussions.

The delegates were from all positions in railroad service, from flagmen to engineers. They were chesty, vigorous men, who were accustomed to energetic action. They represented 50,000 members, about one-third of whom are related to the Roman Catholic Church. Religious differences were not mentioned, but religious life was the subject most enthusiastically discussed. Prominent among the delegates were engineers and conductors, who were effective evangelists, holding "between their runs" meetings with remarkable moral effect among railroad men.

An incident of the conference was the laying by the president of the cornerstone of the new railroad association building now being erected at Topeka by the Santa Fe Railroad and its employes at a cost of $80,000. There were 10,000 people in attendance.

Among the reported developments of the past two years were the opening of associations for street railroad men at Rochester and Brooklyn, the organization of an association in the City of Mexico and the development in the Southwest, especially on the Gould lines, where there are now 12 associations with buildings costing $120,000 and with 7500 members.

PREVENTED A BREAK

Active and Urgent Buying on Crop Damage Held Wheat Firm.

CORN AND OATS LOWER ON FINE WEATHER

Foreign Cables Bearish on Wheat—Receipts Larger of Coarse Grains—Bad Weather Coming.

Grain.

Bullish sentiment and speculation on reports of damage to the winter wheat crop prevented a break in wheat this morning. There were plenty of bearish information and the bears were eager to sell at the opening, but their offerings were so quickly absorbed that no decline could be made. Corn and oats were weaker on the fine weather. Prospects in the West are for a return to unsettled conditions.

WHEAT—A beautiful spring morning and the indications for something like summer heat during the day, a report from Iowa of a very bearish character on the crop, and cables that told of an inactive and unchanged market in Liverpool and ½@1c decline in Paris, and the short interest pretty well cleaned out, was the evidence on file and the conditions presented this morning. This bearish combination did not worry the bull contingent in the home market a little bit. They had an array of damage from the fly in Kansas to the blighted crops of the more eastern regions that sent them hot foot to buy at the opening and instead of a decline here, as there was elsewhere, the market displayed strength. Receipts were moderate—34,700 bu, against 30,100 bu one year ago—and the stock had decreased 60,000 bu so far for week.

July opened with sales at 68⅞c to 69c, sold off to 68⅝c, ranged for a time between 68⅞c and 68¾@69c, then selling at 69c and 69⅛c soon bid. September sold at 67¼c to 67⅜c.

CORN—The weather was perfect in the principal corn-raising states, but did not weaken the market to any extent this morning. There were conditions in the West that looked ominous of a return to unsettled and perhaps stormy weather, and this prevented much of a pressure to sell. Receipts were larger, but of the 73,200 bu posted fully half was for through shipment. The public stock showed 150,000 bu decrease for week and only 41,000 bu held. Liverpool showed strength, having advanced ⅛@¼c.

July opened ⅛c lower at 41⅞c and sold off to 41⅝@41⅞c. September was offered at 41⅝@41¾c.

OATS—This market was also weakened by the fine weather that showed East of the bad conditions in the West and by lower markets elsewhere. Receipts, too, were large, though most of the 783,000 bu reported was not for sale in this market. July was offered at 32¼c.

Trade Topics.

Snow's crop report—The week was the best of the season. Wheat condition fairly well maintained. Some deterioration in Illinois and Missouri, but nothing like failure. If all were wiped out, the area would still exceed last year. Corn planting late, but area as large as last year. Oats June condition is likely to be under normal.

A telegram from McPherson, Kan., to Teasdale Commission Co. reads: "Change in looks of wheatfields; not yet pronounced. Appearance yellow; not improved though weather favorable. Fly developing in untold numbers."

A cable from Griffith, Williams & Co. of Liverpool to Dixon Cunningham says that the German wheat crop reported damaged, many fields replowed and French crop uncertain.

A message in answer to inquiry to Omaha, Neb., says the crops are favorable and no reports of damage from any source.

Letters received here from Indian Territory report the presence of the Hessian fly in the wheat, and claims are made of damage therefrom.

The Commercial West, out today, says their reports do not warrant condition of 92 for winter wheat. Jones, the editor, says conditions are being lowered every day.

Paris cables: "The French chamber of deputies at Paris have formally demanded reduction of duty on wheat of over 50 per cent." Such a reduction would bring the duty down to 13.4c per bu.

Broomhall estimates world's shipments of wheat Monday to be 11,600,000 bu, of which Europe will take about 10,400,000 bu. He estimates there will be a moderate change in the quantity of breadstuffs on passage to both the United Kingdom and the continent. Arrivals of breadstuffs to the United Kingdom during the past week were 3,600,000 bu, as compared with 2,600,000 bu for the corresponding period last year.

A letter from Durant & Elmer, grain dealers of Albany, N. Y., says that the fields are all brown. The hay crop if they don't get rain will be an absolute failure, and oats are no good. There is no doubt, it says, but it is entirely too dry in all the country east of the Mississippi river. Of course if we should have rain in the next few days it would change the complexion of everything."

Thos. B. Teasdale received one good crop report today. His wife left the other day on a visit to Sedalia, Mo., and Mr. Teasdale asked her to let him know how the wheat crop looked along the line of road. Mrs. Teasdale wrote him that she was not a good judge of crops, but the fields looked nice and green and she could not see the ground.

The following from Minneapolis: Reports of growing crop in southern section is O. K., but we hear some complaints of lack of moisture in northern Minnesota and North Dakota. Houses here with Winnipeg connections are receiving reports of dry weather in Manitoba.

Peoria wires: A reliable customer who owns farms near Glassford on the P. & W. West, says farmers in that section find the ground working so unfavorably that they have about decided not to put it in corn.

A private cable from a leading importer of Liverpool states that the German wheat crop is below that of France, but that of Russia generally good. It also says the Continent will be a good importer.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Saved the Life of Mrs. Thos. Wileman, Bardsdale, Cal.

The Life Giving Compound That Wives and Mothers Most Need in May.

Paine's Celery Compound does a wondrous work for sick and half dead women in May. The conditions of winter have been detrimental to the health of women and girls everywhere; they have declined in nervous vigor, the blood is reeking with impurities, the excretory organs do not perform their work, and the digestive machinery is sadly out of gear. The human machine must be cleansed, repaired and strengthened in May. Paine's Celery Compound does the work surprisingly fast, and gives a guarantee of permanent health and long life. It is the one spring medicine that truly nourishes, regulates and invigorates the entire nervous system, from the brain to the minutest nerve filament. It gives a full, rich supply of energizing blood, it clears the muddy, unhealthy skin, it gives an increase in weight, and more refreshing sleep. Whatever be your condition, unhappy sufferer, we give you a blessed assurance of a new and lasting health through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Thos. Wileman, Bardsdale, Cal., writes for ailing and broken down women as follows:—

"I began using Paine's Celery Compound about six years ago. I had severe attacks of sick headache, with sick stomach and vomiting. My friends thought I could not live long, but Paine's Celery Compound cured me. I am now able to do all my own household duties for a family of nine, and I can recommend Paine's Celery Compound to any one suffering as I did with sick and nervous headache."

CIVIC FEDERATION BRANCH FORMED

It Will Offer Its Services to Settle All Industrial Disputes.

FESTUS J. WADE IS MADE CHAIRMAN

Strong Executive and Conciliation Committees Appointed — First Steps Were Taken During Fair Dedication.

The St. Louis branch of the National Civic Federation of St. Louis, organization of which was completed at a meeting at the Mercantile Club Friday night, will offer its services to settle all differences between employes and employers by arbitration and on all other occasions when it is thought by the federation that the services of the organization will promote the industrial welfare of St. Louis.

Festus J. Wade is chairman of the federation; W. F. Niedringhaus, first vice-chairman; Richard DeBarry, second vice-chairman; Charles H. Hutting, secretary, and F. C. Schwedtman, secretary.

The organization of the St. Louis Federation has been pending for some time. It is modeled along the lines of the National Civic Federation, which has done good work in the settlement of strikes in the East.

While many of the prominent members of the Federation from the eastern cities were in St. Louis attending the dedication of the World's Fair, a meeting was held at which preliminary steps toward organization were taken.

Many citizens interested in the welfare of St. Louis attended the meeting.

The St. Louis branch will work independently of the National Federation, except at such times as it is deemed best to call upon the National Federation for assistance.

The executive and conciliation committees are formed from the three divisions of public men, the representatives of the public, having only a general interest in the industrial welfare, and the two directly interested classes, the wage-earners and the employers.

The committees as appointed at the meeting are: Executive committee, F. M. Crunden, Elias Michael, W. S. Chaplin, T. P. McPheeters and F. N. Junson; the employers by George W. Brown, F. N. Johnson, G. F. Steedman, H. C. Gillick and C. H. Spencer; the wage-earners by W. A. Kenward, J. F. Wade, Thomas Kinsella, Geo. C. Newman and H. A. Walters. Conciliation committee, Ben Schnurmacher, J. W. Bell, John F. Lee, James L. Blair and Dwight F. Davis for the public; J. J. Morrison, A. W. Morrison, M. J. Dwyer and R. B. Parker for the wage-earners; F. A. Drew, Paul Brown, O. L. Garrison, J. J. Collins and J. H. Conrades, Jr., for the employers. This committee will hold its first meeting on Monday evening.

ST. LOUIS WILL BE THEIR HOME

Ex-Senator Vest and Wife Will Take Up Their Residence Here in Fall.

Mrs. George Graham Vest, wife of the former United States senator from Missouri, arrived in St. Louis Friday night from Washington, D. C. Her husband is expected to reach St. Louis in about ten days.

Mrs. Vest will be a guest at the residence of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George P. B. Jackson, 5019 Thornby place, for a few weeks.

About June 1 Mr. and Mrs. Vest will go to Sweet Springs, Mo., where they have a summer cottage.

In the fall they will return to St. Louis to make their permanent home here. It is not yet decided where this will be, but friends of the family say that it will very likely be near the Jackson home in Thornby place, a quiet, pretty residence park in the Cabanne district.

There are several vacant lots in the place, which runs from the Suburban tracks to Maple avenue, one block west of Goodfellow avenue, and it is stated that the distinguished Missourian may build a home there in which to pass his declining years.

"He is not nearly so feeble and infirm as many people seem to think," said a friend of the family to the Post-Dispatch Saturday. He expects to live many years yet."

Senator Vest is still in Washington arranging his personal affairs, preparatory to his final departure from the capitol, where he has long been a conspicuous figure. His daughter, Mrs. Jackson, is with him.

She went to Washington about three weeks ago with her daughter, Miss Sallie Jackson. This young lady accompanied Mrs. Vest on her trip to St. Louis.

Girls Who Work

Girls who work are particularly susceptible to female ills, especially when obliged to stand on their feet from morning until night.

Day in and day out, month in and month out, the year through, the working girl toils; she is often the bread winner of the family, and must work that others may live; whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, whether it is warm or cold she must get to her place of employment and perform the duties exacted from her.

Among this class the symptoms of female diseases are early manifest by weak and aching backs, pain in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach; in consequence of frequent wetting of the feet monthly periods become painful and irregular, and frequently faint and dizzy spells, with loss of appetite, until life is a burden and it is hard work to drag about. All these symptoms point to a derangement of the female organism, and if taken in time can be easily and permanently cured.

A Cordial Invitation to Every Sick and Ailing Working Girl.

It is to these girls that Mrs. Pinkham holds out a helping hand, and extends a cordial invitation to correspond with her. Her unrivalled record of success in treating woman's ills makes her letters of advice of untold value to every ailing working girl, and from her wide experience and skill she quickly points the way to health. Her advice is free, and all letters are held by her in the strictest confidence. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. Don't put off writing her until your health is wrecked.

Grateful Words from Working Girls Who Have Been Helped.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I want to thank you for what you have done for me. I was dreadfully tired, I stand over my work all day, and no one who hasn't tried it knows how it makes your back and sides ache. I couldn't sleep, and had no appetite, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I feel entirely different now; it is a wonderful medicine. I do not feel that my work is hard now, and I recommend your medicine to other girls who are always tired."—MISS ISABEL SURGIN, 293 Willis Ave., New York City.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done so much good for me that I wish to recommend it to all girls whose work keeps them standing on their feet all day in a hot store. The doctor said I could not live and I must give up work, and stay out of doors; he did not seem to realize that a girl cannot afford to stop working. My back ached, my appetite was poor and I could not sleep; menstruation was scanty and very painful. One day when suffering I commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me, I soon found that my menstrual periods were free from pain and natural; now my health is fine, and every one is surprised at the change in me, and I cannot be too grateful for what you have done for me."—MISS JANET PAINE, 530 West 125th Street, New York City.—$5000.00 forfeit if originals of above letters proving genuineness cannot be produced.
